Chalices stolen from church found

The Rev. Jonathan Meyer of St. Anne's Catholic Church discusses the golden items stolen from his church last week as Sheriff Steve Hoppock looks on.

NORTH VERNON — Investigators have recovered many of the golden chalices burglars stole from a church last week.

Many of the religious pieces were damaged in a fall from a bridge.

Investigators believe thieves dropped the 700-pound safe containing the gold from the bridge in hopes of busting it open.

The safe was stolen either late Sunday or early Monday from St. Anne's Catholic Church in the 4500 block of North Road 150 East in Jennings County.

The gold pieces, valued at several thousands of dollars, had been owned by St. Anne's since its founding nearly 170 years ago.

Jennings County Sheriff's Department recovered the items Wednesday and Thursday while raiding a home in Austin.

JCSD was assisted by Scott County, Scottsburg and Austin police.

No one was home during the raid, but police found what they were looking for.

The Rev. Jonathan Meyer of St. Anne's identified the items deputies recovered as the ones stolen from the church.

Investigators later located the stolen safe in a creek in a remote area of Scott County.

Suspects ID'd

JCSD investigators have identified suspects in the theft and are seeking arrest warrants from Jennings County Prosecutor Alan Marshall.

Sheriff Steve Hoppock said tips from the public were instrumental in locating the stolen items and in identifying suspects.

Business of benefits

JOEL PHILIPPSEN | THE REPUBLIC

George Dinn has worked at Frank Anderson Tire for 26 years. The company contributes to employee health care.

BY BORIS LADWIG
bladwig@therepublic.com

WHEN Petersville resident George Dinn began working for Frank Anderson Tire Co. 26 years ago, he cared very little about the business' health insurance benefit.

He was 29 and practically never went to the doctor, he said.

He previously had worked for Estes Material Sales in Hope.

"I sold rocks," he said with a chuckle.

His job kept him away from home a lot. He made sales calls in nearby states and visited landscaping shows, staying in hotels an average three nights a week.

When his wife, Debbie, got pregnant with their second child, he wanted to find a job that would allow him to spend more time with his family.

All four family members received health insurance through Anderson Tire when the children were growing up. Dinn and his wife still do.

Dinn, 55, said his younger co-workers do not realize how much that benefit can help.

His insurance, through Humana, includes medical, dental, vision and prescription coverage. It pays 80 percent of any bills, excluding deductibles.

About 20 years ago, he suffered extreme light sensitivity in his eyes and he was losing his sight due to keratoconus, a degenerative thinning of the cornea. He received cornea transplants in both eyes, at a cost about $10,000, covered mostly by his medical insurance — not the vision plan.

About two years ago, he received another cornea transplant in his right eye. He also wears hard contacts and needs reading glasses.

Dinn said he likely will have to have transplants again.

About 40,000 corneal transplants are performed in the U.S. annually, according to the National Institutes of Health.

Dinn also takes Toprol for an irregular heartbeat, paying $10 per month out of pocket.

"To me, health insurance is very important," Dinn said recently, sitting in Frank Anderson Tire Co.'s upstairs office amid stacks of paper. Dinn had taken a break from his usual duties

Property tax bills expected to be on time

BY PAUL MINNIS
pminnis@therepublic.com

Property tax bills are on course to arrive in mailboxes in April, signifying a return to traditional on-time billing after years of problems.

Bartholomew County Auditor Barb Hackman said her office on Nov. 30 sent certified assessed values to the Indiana Department of Local Government Finance.

That was four days before a state-imposed cutoff that state officials said would guarantee their return of a budget order to all counties that submitted on time.

Budget orders, expected in February, contain the vital tax rates that are a must for any county to move

Unemployed continue search for work

NASHVILLE — Sheila Trosclair was laid off work at Columbus Components Group April 9 and has been looking for work ever since.

She sends out 10 to 15 applications per week, mostly online.

On the rare occasion that she does get a response, the potential employer usually tells her that he is not hiring but will keep her resume on file.

She has yet to land an interview.

No one is hiring, she said.

"Not even Burger King."

Trosclair's husband, Ronald, and their daughter, Melissa Saechao, lost their jobs at CCG before Trosclair, though that was somewhat expected, as both worked there as temps.

The three live under one roof, together with Saechao's three children, ages 2, 3 and 6.

Members of Columbus Police Department and SWAT Team train their weapons on a man as he surrenders himself Saturday in the 2200 block of Franklin Street. No charges were filed on the man, who police say locked himself in a bathroom following a domestic dispute with family members.

Local man surrenders after hour-long standoff

BY BRIAN SANDERS
bsanders@therepublic.com

A standoff with a man armed with a shotgun and barricaded in a bathroom ended peacefully Saturday afternoon.

At about 1 p.m., Columbus Police Department responded to a home in the 2200 block of Franklin Street to reports of a man threatening suicide.

Lt. Joe Richardson, CPD's information officer, reported that the man sent text messages to friends and family outlining intentions, which led to the 911 call.

Officers from Bartholomew County Sheriff's Department and Indiana State Police soon joined CPD.

Many of the officers were dressed in SWAT gear.

Traffic to the neighborhood was blocked while police tried to convince the man to come out of the house and surrender.

Richardson said police evacuated one or two neighboring houses; other residents peered curiously from their windows as police darted back and forth from the cover of their squad cars.

After a little more than an hour, the man came out of the house unarmed and surrendered to police without incident.

He was taken to Columbus Regional Hospital for evaluation.

Richardson said Saturday afternoon that CPD had no intention of filing charges against the man.

Campers brave cold for homeless awareness

BY BRIAN SANDERS
bsanders@therepublic.com

Several Columbus residents concerned about the well-being of the city's homeless braved bone-chilling temperatures Saturday to raise awareness on the issue.

Early Saturday, members of the Columbus Homeless Advocates Team, led by Rev. Chris Rutan, pitched a tent on the steps of City Hall, where they intended to stay for the next 24 hours.

Organizers had hoped for a larger turnout, but cold temperatures likely put a damper on participation.

Even so, as of Saturday afternoon, about a dozen supporters had been in and out of the camp to offer their support to the core group of five or six campers.

Liz Dolgner, who first became involved with the group about a year ago, hoped the display would encourage area shelters and outreach programs to re-examine their policies, which she believes make too many demands on those who need their help most.

Many organizations require the homeless to present identification cards or have a mailing address before they will help them, which Dolgner calls ridiculous.

Rutan, who operated the Hope for the Living shelter out of his parents' home from late 2008 to April 2009, said officials who downplay the issue of homelessness in Columbus are kidding themselves.

Citing numerous layoffs in the current economy, he expects homeless numbers to double or triple in the coming months as the unemployed burn through the cash that should have been their nest egg and subsequently lose their home.

The demonstration was dedicated to James Payne and Corey Sidwell, homeless men who died less than a year apart, Rutan explained.

"Everybody needs to reach out and help someone sometime," he said.

He and the others hoped their living in the elements for a day would encourage others to lend a helping hand.

Afghan parliament member Ramazan Bashardost displays his voting ballot for the new cabinet in Kabul, Afghanistan, Saturday. Afghan parliament began voting on President Hamid Karzai's list of nominees for his new cabinet.

Parliament rejects Karzai's Cabinet list

BY RAHIM FAIEZ AND DEB RIECHMANN
Associated Press

KABUL — A chastened President Hamid Karzai must submit new Cabinet picks after defiant lawmakers rejected 17 of his 24 nominees Saturday, including a powerful warlord and the country's only woman minister.

The Afghan parliament rejected nominees viewed as Karzai's political cronies, those believed to be under the influence of warlords and others deemed unqualified.

"I think, unfortunately, that the criteria were either ethnicity or bribery or money," lawmaker Fawzia Kufi said of Karzai's picks.

The vote was a setback to Karzai, though one political analyst in Kabul speculated that it could free up the president to appoint qualified professionals rather than settle political debts.

"There were lots of demands on Karzai from people asking for Cabinet positions because they campaigned for him," Mohammad Qasim Akhgar said. "This was the only way he could reward them and if parliament didn't approve them, it wasn't his fault. Very soon, Karzai will come out with a new list with the names of people he really wants to have in his Cabinet."

The new Cabinet is a bellwether for the U.S. and other nations hoping a stronger government will keep disenchanted Afghans from siding with the Taliban after Karzai won a second five-year term last year in a disputed election rife with ballot-box stuffing.

The lawmakers approved a handful of incumbent ministers favored by the West and instrumental to the war effort.

Karzai has defended his choices, which he announced late last month after several delays. He said his proposed Cabinet represented a balance of the nation's ethnic factions.

But parliamentarians weren't happy. They complained the list looked too much like the existing Cabinet and spelled another five years of business as usual for the Karzai government, which has been criticized as being corrupt and ineffective.

Plane returns safely

BOSTON — A New York-bound plane has returned safely to Boston's Logan International Airport after a pilot smelled smoke in the cockpit minutes after takeoff.

Airport spokesman Matthew Brelis says Flight 1379 landed safely Saturday and returned to the gate under its own power.

Delta spokesman Carlos Santos says the airline was investigating the cause of the smoke smell Saturday. In the meantime, Santos says the plane's passengers were rebooked for an early afternoon flight.

Brelis said the Flight 1379 took off for LaGuardia Airport in New York at about 10:45 a.m. carrying 34 people, including crew. He says a pilot turned back about eight minutes into the flight.

BOGOTA — Authorities say the Galeras volcano in southeastern Colombia has erupted. There are no immediate reports of deaths or injuries.

Carlos Ivan Marquez, national aid director for the Red Cross, says officials may evacuate 8,000 people as a precaution after the eruption at 7:43 p.m. Saturday.

The 14,110-foot Mount Galeras is Colombia's most active volcano. It sits just over 6 miles from Pasto, the provincial capital of 500,000 people.

The suspect, who was shot twice by a police officer responding to the scene, was rolled into a Danish court on a stretcher, his face covered. He was ordered held for four weeks on preliminary charges of attempting to murder the cartoonist, as well as the police officer who shot him.

Efforts to protect the artist — 74-year-old Kurt Westergaard — were immediately stepped up, as he was moved to an undisclosed location.

Iran warns West

TEHRAN, Iran — Iran set a one-month deadline Saturday for the West to accept its counterproposal to a U.N.-drafted nuclear plan and warned that otherwise it will produce reactor fuel at a higher level of enrichment on its own.

The warning was a show of defiance and a hardening of Iran's stance over its nuclear program, which the West fears masks an effort to develop a nuclear weapons capability. Tehran insists its program is only for peaceful purposes, such as electricity production, and says it has no intention of making a bomb.

Bus plunges off cliff

TIJUANA, Mexico — A bus carrying farm workers and their families home plunged off a cliff in northern Mexico on Saturday, killing 14 people and injuring 21.

The bus was traveling along a treacherously winding stretch of highway before dawn when it veered off at high speed over a cliff halfway between the border cities of Tijuana and Mexicali, according to reports from police and prosecutors.

The cause of the crash was under investigation. One man injured in the crash told investigators the bus appeared to have brake trouble before the wreck and quoted the drivers as saying a mechanic would be available in Mexicali.

Communities take back tax breaks

BY DON BABWIN
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Cash-strapped communities have a message for corporations that promised jobs in return for tax breaks: A deal's a deal.

As the economy sputters along, municipalities struggling to fix roads, fund schools and pay bills increasingly are rescinding tax abatements to companies that don't hire enough workers, that lay them off or that close up shop. At the same time, they're sharpening new incentive deals, leaving no doubt what is expected of companies and what will happen if they don't deliver.

"We will roll out the red carpet as much as we can (but) they are going to honor the contract," said Brendon Gallagher, an alderman in DeKalb, Ill., where Target Corp. got abatements from the city, county, school district and other taxing bodies after promising at least 500 jobs at a local distribution center.

So when the company came up 66 workers short in 2009, Target got word its next tax bill would be jumping almost $600,000 — more than half of which goes to the local school district, where teachers and programs have been cut as coffers dried up.

The newfound boldness comes from communities and states that have long bent over backward to lure companies and jobs by offering abatements and other incentives — to the tune of an estimated $60 billion a year in the United States, according to the Washington-based economic development watchdog group Good Jobs First.

The willingness to write — and enforce — the "clawback" provisions comes even as companies across the country struggle and against a broader backdrop of governments getting tough on business practices.

"The public is a lot more aware of tax abatements and there's a climate of skepticism about what can be perceived as corporate handouts," said Geoff McKimm, a member of the Monroe County Council in Indiana.

JOBLESS

$4,000 a month to about $800.

It's enough to buy food and to keep the heat and lights on, she said, but the family twice almost lost its home.

She said the family gets by because it buys less-expensive food and has cut costs by foregoing all luxuries — except high-speed Internet service, through which Trosclair files her applications and keeps up on the news.

"We never go out anymore," she said.

And although all six family members are healthy at the moment, she worries about unexpected medical bills.

"Right now we're living on ifs and maybes," she said.

Unemployment rate

Bartholomew County's average unemployment rate in 2009, about 9 percent through October, roughly doubled from the 4.6 percent recorded in 2008.

The rate has fallen from a 2009 high of 9.9 percent in June to 8.6 percent in October, and the number of people reported unemployed has fallen by about 500.

However, new jobs have been scarce: In June, the county employed 36,831. By October — though the unemployment rate fell — the number had fallen to 35,637.

That indicates that some long-term unemployed people have gotten frustrated and given up looking for a job. People who quit looking for work are not counted as unemployed.

Many former CCG workers share Trosclair's fate, but a few have found work: Columbus resident Anthony Davis, who worked at CCG for 12 years, said he applied for a maintenance job with Sacoma, in Edinburgh's industrial park, shortly after CCG's troubles began.

He left CCG on Friday, May 8, but by Monday, May 11, he was working at Sacoma and has been there since.

Trosclair said that after being laid off from CCG, she could have received assistance to go back to school for retraining, but she said at her age, 57, it would not have made a whole lot of sense.

But she said her experience of working more than 30 years, most of it in manufacturing — she has worked at For Bare Feet in Brown County, Cummins, Brown County Inn and at RCA in Bloomington — would make her a valuable employee.

She said she hopes to find a manufacturing job in Bartholomew or Jackson counties. Even though gasoline expenses would lower her income, she said she could carpool with her husband if he found a job, too.

And while paying all the bills currently presents some challenges, Trosclair and her husband are thankful that unemployment benefits, which were scheduled to end at the end of the year, have been extended through February.

The family celebrated a subdued Christmas, but has been able to purchase Christmas dinner and obtain some gifts for the children, through help from their school.

"We're thankful for that," she said.

Though predictions about the speed of the economic recovery have been varied, Trosclair said she hopes the economy will turn around soon so that she and her husband can go back to work.

Sheila Trosclair prepares Christmas Eve dinner at the family's home in Brown County. Trosclair, her husband and two of her children all worked at CCG and now are unemployed. Trosclair said she hopes the new year brings a job opportunity.

TAX

forward with billing.

"It's looking very promising that we'll finally get back on schedule," Hackman said. "But I guess you never know what could happen."

A return to the traditional cycle would mean tax bills are mailed to residents in April, with the first half of the total due May 10 and the last half due Nov. 10.

In recent years, billing has been months late.

Bills in 2008 went out in early October, with due dates Oct. 22 and Dec. 5.

This year's bills went out in July, with due dates July 31 and the typical Nov. 10.

Hackman said the situation is being corrected for several reasons.

She said state-imposed tax caps caused a big delay last year, because the county assessor's office had to figure the cap for each parcel in the county.

Also, the assessor's office still was performing trending, a new system that factors neighborhood values into the assessed values of individual properties.

Hackman said that work is over.

She also credited good communication among the county offices.

She said many problems were solved quickly as a result.

County Treasurer Vernon Jewell said on-time bills would be a welcome new year's gift for taxpayers who like to know when their taxes are due and how much they will need to pay.

"Instead of the 15 days they have had the last few years, now they'll have four or five weeks," he said. "Some people need more time to find the money."

The treasurer's office is responsible for taking the bill amounts forwarded to them by the auditor and printing and mailing those bills to county residents.

On-time bills also help the taxing units that get a share of the taxes and count on them to meet daily operating expenses, including paying government employees.

Hackman said the county avoided borrowing from an outside entity by cutting expenses.

"We asked all the county offices each to cut 10 percent from their budgets, and we told them not to ask for any additional appropriations," she said.

She said the county also gave tax advances whenever possible to itself and the other taxing units.

Money for those advances come from any property taxes residents and business owners pay early.

Pam Harrell, who works in the Columbus clerk-treasurer office, said the city borrowed about $5 million in 2008 and $4.5 million in 2009 from the Indiana Bond Bank to meet its expenses.

This year's amount, which the city will pay off next week, came with a 1.79-percent interest rate, adding $74,285 to the total.

"That hurts the taxpayers," Harrell said. "Getting back on track would be good news for our cash flow."

JCSD seeks help from public to locate suspect

By Brian Sanders
bsanders@therepublic.com

NORTH VERNON — Jennings County Sheriff's Department needs the public's help in locating a Ripley County man suspected of dealing methamphetamine.

On Wednesday, JCSD enlisted the help of Indiana State Police's Emergency Response Team in serving a search warrant on the home of William "Woody" Baker in the 700 block of North Road 700 West near Holton in Ripley County.

Baker is suspected of supplying meth to users in Jennings County.

Investigators also believe he accepted stolen high-performance automobile parts taken Sept. 30 in the Geneva Township area in exchange for the drug.

Inside Baker's home, police found and arrested 18-year-old Destiny Reeder, who lives at the address and was wanted on a Jennings County warrant for failure to appear in court.

Baker was not at home.

Jennings and Ripley investigators later discovered a meth lab and stolen items, including the car parts reported missing from Jennings County.

Police also found several stolen guns.

ISP officers dismantled the lab.

JCSD still is looking for Baker and asks that anyone with information on his whereabouts call the department's tip line at 346-0342.

Obama cites apparent al-Qaida link to bomb plot

By Philip Elliott
Associated Press

President's Radio Address

HONOLULU — An al-Qaida affiliate in Yemen apparently ordered the Christmas Day plot against a U.S. airliner, training and arming the 23-year-old Nigerian man accused in the failed bombing, President Barack Obama said Saturday.

"This is not the first time this group has targeted us," Obama said, reporting on some of the findings of an administration review into how intelligence agencies failed to prevent Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab from boarding Detroit-bound Northwest Flight 253.

In his most direct public language to date, Obama described the path through Yemen of Abdulmutallab. He also emphasized that the United States would continue its partnerships with friendly countries — citing Yemen, in particular — to fight terrorists and extremist groups.

The U.S. plans to more than double its counterterrorism aid to the impoverished, fragmented Arab nation in the coming year to support Yemen's campaign against al-Qaida.

Putting pieces together

Obama's homeland security team has been piecing together just how Abdulmutallab was able to get on the plane. Officials have described flaws in the system and by those executing the strategy and have delivered a preliminary assessment.

A top counterterrorism official said Saturday that al-Qaida and others extremists are working to test U.S. defenses and launch an attack on American soil.

The failed attempt against the plane "is the starkest of reminders of the insidious terrorist threats we face," said Michael Leiter, director of the National Counterterrorism Center. "We know with absolute certainty that al-Qaida and those who support its ideology continue to refine their methods to test our defenses and pursue an attack on the homeland," he said.

The center, part of the Office of the Director of National Intelligence, draws experts from the CIA, FBI, Pentagon and other agencies who try to ensure that clues about potential attacks are not missed.

A senior administration official had said the United States increasingly was confident of a link between Abdulmutallab and an al-Qaida affiliate, but Obama's statement was the strongest connection between the two. The official said regular updates from the White House Situation Room and from his homeland security advisers gave Obama enough confidence to use this radio address — typically, focused on domestic priorities — to communicate a stark message about Abdulmutallab.

"We know that he traveled to Yemen, a country grappling with crushing poverty and deadly insurgencies. It appears that he joined an affiliate of al-Qaida, and that this group — al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula — trained him, equipped him with those explosives and directed him to attack that plane headed for America," the president said in his weekly radio and Internet address. It was released by the White House during Obama's vacation in Hawaii.

Officials have said Abdulmutallab's father warned the U.S. Embassy in Nigeria that his son had drifted into extremism in the al-Qaida hotbed of Yemen. Abdulmutallab's threat was only partially digested by the U.S. security apparatus and not linked with a visa history showing the young man could fly to the U.S.

Obama has ordered a thorough look at the shortcomings that permitted the plot, which failed not because of U.S. actions but because the would-be attacker was unable to ignite an explosive device. He has summoned homeland security officials to meet with him in the White House Situation Room on Tuesday.

Fate of color-coded threat system unknown

By Lisa Hoffman
Scripps Howard News Service

WASHINGTON CALLING

WASHINGTON - The unsuccessful underwear-bomb attack has triggered this question: Whither the color-coded terrorism threat system imposed after 9/11?

Long the butt of jokes by late-night TV hosts and discredited by some experts as both too simplistic and vulnerable to abuse for political purposes, the "Homeland Security Advisory System" is dangling in limbo.

The Christmas Day attempt to blow up a jetliner did not budge the nation from its overall "yellow" state, which means the threat of terrorism is "elevated." That is where it has stood since January 2004, although specific sectors — mass transit, commercial aviation, financial services — have occasionally been boosted to "orange" when threats have been detected.

Early in his White House term, President Barack Obama signaled the likely demise of the system, and the appointment of a task force to evaluate whether it should be refined or replaced.

The committee, which submitted its report in September, found itself split, with half of the members supporting the current system as "clear, powerful and easily understood," and the other half calling it deficient in credibility and clarity. Both camps agreed that refinements, at the very least, are needed.

So far, no action on the recommendations by Homeland Security chief Janet Napolitano has come to light.

Cruise ship safety

Cruise ships may be on course to become safer, but not in time for vacations this winter.

In November, the House passed a measure that would force, for the first time, a number of security requirements on the cruise-ship industry, which has been criticized for lax policies in the wake of onboard murders, rapes and falls.

Among the provisions: Ships would be required to report serious crimes that happen aboard to the FBI no matter if the ship is in international waters at the time. On-deck rails would have to stand at least 42 inches high to prevent passengers from falling overboard, and peep holes and secure latches would have to be installed in cabin doors to protect passengers from intruders. And special antiretroviral medications used to prevent the transmission of AIDS from a sexual assault would have to be stocked.

The bill has laid dormant in the Senate since mid-November.

Looking for new pack

In Iraq, U.S. troops spend a considerable amount of mission-time in vehicles, or walking short-duration patrols. That means they don't carry much gear on their backs. In Afghanistan, Army soldiers are going on more long patrols, doing three-day rotations at remote observation posts and conducting helicopter assaults.

Picking up complaints that the backpacks available to those deployed to Afghanistan were too large and unwieldy, the Army is fielding a new pack and will test three prototypes soon, according to the Web site Military.com.

Flu numbers down

Swine-flu anxiety may be waning as the number of cases declines and supplies of once-rare vaccine pile up, but the Food and Drug Administration is still warning consumers to beware of scams related to the pandemic.

Product lines shut down by the agency and the Federal Trade Commission this year have included assorted operations shipping fake or diluted Tamiflu pills — one batch of which included acetaminophen and talc. A spray that claims to leave a coating of ionic silver on the hands to kill flu virus was pulled, as well as an electronic device that claims to boost the immune system with "deeply penetrating, mega-frequency life-force energy waves."

of selling tires and rims. He sells anything from replacements for a typical four-door family sedan to exotic, two-tone chrome rims that have to be special-ordered.

Despite his health problems, Dinn tries to get in some physical exercise. He played softball, usually first base or pitcher, through Columbus Parks and Recreation Department until last year, which, he said with a slight grin, was "terrible."

He picked up golf this year, playing once a week, usually with his son, an accountant at Blue & Co.

Business options

Frank Anderson, owner of Frank Anderson Tire Co., 2304 Hawcreek Ave., said his 15 employees pay 25 percent of health insurance premiums. When premiums rise, the employees bear 25 percent of the increase so that their share remains the same.

Anderson said he has offered health insurance benefits since he opened in 1971.

Local plumber Joe Lohmeyer pays all of the health insurance premiums for his 12 employees and any children they choose to have covered.

"I think offering health care to your employees is a moral obligation," he said.

But as a businessman, he knows that he cannot stay in business if his costs keep going up more than his revenues.

His premiums have gone up between 8 and 15 percent over the last few years, he said. And last year, he faced a 28 percent increase — until he increased the plan's deductible.

Lohmeyer and Anderson compared health care expenses to utility bills and wages: They're part of doing business.

And they try to lower health care costs in much the same way: To lower electricity bills they might purchase more efficient appliances, low-energy light bulbs or remind employees to turn off computers when they're not being used. To lower health insurance costs, employers can increase deductibles, eliminate the dental portion or pass on a portion of the cost to employees.

> "I think offering health care to your employees is a moral obligation."
> – Joe Lohmeyer

Marc Rothbart, senior vice president of SIHO Insurance Services, said businesses also increasingly are limiting access to their plans for employees' working spouses: If the spouse can obtain health insurance through his or her employer, then he or she cannot enroll in the plan offered by the other's employer, even if that plan is better or less expensive.

Economic drag

"The economy has put tremendous pressure on businesses, especially small businesses," Rothbart said.

"When companies are looking to reduce expenses, it is hard to ignore health care expense as it is such a big line item," he said.

With costs continuing to increase dramatically, businesses are struggling to offer the benefit at all, said Michael Ripley, vice president of health care policy and work force safety for the Indiana Chamber of Commerce.

Ripley, a former state legislator and Allstate Insurance agent, said rising costs also put a drag on hiring, because some businesses try to avoid more fixed health care costs by asking employees to work more or by hiring temporary or part-time workers.

Rothbart said, however, that businesses that cut the benefit altogether may see employees leave for larger, more stable companies — at least in a healthy economy.

Employees are unlikely to go to a competitor, Rothbart said, because competitors of equal size "are usually in the same unstable benefit situation."

John B. Horowitz, associate professor of economics at Ball State University, said some businesses avoid adding fixed health costs by asking employees to work overtime.

For each 40 hours of overtime (one hour each for 40 employees or two hours each for 20 employees, etc.), the business can avoid hiring another employee.

However, Lohmeyer and Anderson said that health insurance costs have very little impact on their hiring decisions.

Lohmeyer said that overtime can be used only sparingly to address a spike in business.

There comes a point, he said, where worker happiness — and productivity — declines materially as their overtime hours increase.

Anderson said that he hires whenever he sees that sustained business warrants more employees.

"Our hiring decisions are based on needs," he said.

Horowitz also said, though, that regardless of whether the employee or employer pay for the benefit, increasing costs put a drag on wages and the economy.

He said economists estimate that health insurance costs about $12,000 per year per family. Even if employers cover all of that, Horowitz said, employees probably are paid close to $12,000 less than what they would otherwise be paid — or businesses lack that money to hire more people or reinvest those funds to improve their operations.

Broadcast deal

LOS ANGELES — The Fox television network and Time Warner Cable have announced an agreement in principle on a television programming deal that will allow signals to continue for millions of cable subscribers.

Fox had threatened to force Time Warner Cable and Bright House Networks to drop the Fox broadcast signal from 14 of its TV stations and half a dozen of its cable channels as a contract expired at midnight Thursday.

Rising cost of care

Employers finding ways to control price of health insurance

By Boris Ladwig

Cummins and Columbus Regional Hospital are combating rising health insurance costs partially by focusing on preventive care and technological innovation.

Health insurance costs for U.S. employers have increased an average 10 percent or more in the last few years. Aon Consulting, which annually surveys about 70 health insurers around the country, has in the last few years projected annual increases of up to 16 percent, according to Associated Press.

Increases for employees typically have been about 3 or 4 percentage points lower, according to Aon.

Columbus Regional Hospital employees during that period saw their health premiums increase an average 3.7 percent.

And Cummins Inc. employees have seen no increase in payroll deduction for health care benefits in the last three years.

"Cummins believes the best way to keep health care costs under control is to work closely with employees to help them make informed decisions about their personal health and medical care options," said Mark Land, executive director of corporate communications.

More than 90 percent of Cummins employees participate in one of the company's consumer-directed health plans.

"Those plans provide Cummins employees with education and tools that allow them to make informed health care decisions," Land said.

"In addition, preventative care and wellness services are a major part of our health care coverage."

The plans cover preventive care for employees and their families and provide:

- On-site health services for occupational and non-occupational care.
- Disease management.
- Smoking cessation.
- Weight management.

"As part of the 2010 plan, the company also offered up to $600 in incentives toward their premiums to employees who completed a basic health screening," Land said.

The move to consumer-driven health care "has resulted in lower-than-average increases in health care costs to the company over the past five years," according to Cummins.

However, premiums for Cummins employees will increase in 2010.

CRH

Health premiums for Columbus Regional Hospital have increased an average 3.7 percent in the last three years — after increasing an average of more than 14 percent in the three years before that.

"We are working diligently across many areas to be more efficient to reduce the cost of health care for patients," said Denise Glesing, director of planning and marketing.

She said CRH works closely with vendors to achieve better prices for supplies. CRH also has used Six Sigma experts to reduce costs. Six Sigma employs statistics to identify and correct problems.

Glesing said CRH's financial services this year began using a paperless pay system, giving employees quick access to deposit information and generating savings.

But, Glesing said, CRH also controls health care costs by limiting new hires "so as not to have more costs in the system."

And health care expenses at CRH are rising faster than other costs: As a percentage of all expenses, health care costs rose from 5.5 percent in 2006 to 6.5 percent in 2009. And as a percentage of payroll, health-benefit costs rose from 14.45 percent in 2006 to 17.64 percent this year, through Oct. 31.

Glesing said the increases partially were caused by the economy.

"We have seen more participants on our health plan over the past year due to the recession, as CRH employees who have had spouses lose their jobs and benefits at other companies instead move their spouse/dependents to the hospital health plan.

"We continue to take a focused effort at CRH for employee health and wellness, which helps to reduce large health care claims," she said.

SIHO

Marc Rothbart, senior vice president of SIHO Insurance Services, said health care costs are rising partially because of new and more expensive technologies and new and more expensive drugs.

Some of those increased costs will lower costs in the long-term, Rothbart said.

Some drugs, for example, could reduce the need for costlier procedures down the line.

Costs also are increasing because of more charity care, or the care that hospitals provide but for which they do not get reimbursed, Rothbart said.

Columbus Regional Hospital, for example, dispensed in 2007 more than $8 million of care for which it was not reimbursed by patients.

It also provided care of more than $35 million for which it was not reimbursed by Medicare and Medicaid.

Combined, that unpaid care is roughly the equivalent of half of the salaries and benefits CRH paid that year.

Rothbart said that Congress should try to put a downward pressure on prices by, for example using electronic medical records so that critical data can be accessed by all the patient's care providers.

"But most importantly," Rothbart said, "we should concentrate on reducing the demand for health care.

"Regardless of who is paying for our nation's health care, one thing is certain: If people don't take more personal responsibility for getting healthier and maintaining their health we will be bankrupt."

Rothbart said the nation must spend more money on early education for nutrition and exercise.

"We absolutely cannot be cutting health and fitness education in schools," he said.

In November, school board members gave mixed reactions to a proposed waiver to grant some high school students physical education credits for participation in sports or physically demanding classes.

Some members of Bartholomew Consolidated School Board said the proposal "sends the wrong message" in an era of increasing childhood obesity.

Rothbart also said that the nation must find ways to make healthier foods more affordable.

"In a land where we pay farmers not to produce, we should be able to figure out how to make produce, lean proteins and high fiber foods accessible to families of all income levels," he said.

Joel Philippsen | The Republic

SIHO employee Kristen Munn, right, exercises during a fitness class in the basement of the SIHO building on Washington Street. SIHO and major employers, such as Cummins Inc. and Columbus Regional Hospital, increasingly are including preventive measures, such as wellness and disease management, in their health benefits to improve their employees' lives – and to lower long-term costs.

Insurance options

Businesses have two basic options when they've determined that they want to offer their employees health insurance benefits. The basic options and their advantages/disadvantages:

Option	For	Upsides	How it works	Downsides
Fully insured Note: Insurance companies typically spread the risk by pooling employers of similar size.	Smaller businesses (less than 100 employees).	The insurance company is taking all of the risk.	Small employers can have big swings in health expenses, and one large claim could force a small business into bankruptcy. Therefore, small employers purchase policies that make their expenses more predictable. For example, an employer could purchase a policy that insures that his out-of-pocket health expenses do not exceed $100,000.	Expensive.
Self-insured	Businesses with 100 or more employees.	Cheaper than fully-insured. Cash-flow advantages: Claims are being funded as they happen —instead of up front through premium — allowing companies to hold on to their money longer — instead of letting the insurance company hold their money.	Health claims expenses in a very large pool of employees can be more easily absorbed and more easily predicted. Therefore, large employers can spread the risk of high health claims among a greater number of employees.	The customer is taking all or a greater part of the risk.

Variables

Employers have a wide array of options among the two basic ways of offering health insurance to their employees. Typically employers offer the benefit to hire and retain high-quality employees, so they look to see what is common in the geographic areas in which they do business. The government is encouraging this arrangement by allowing employee contributions to be made on a pretax basis.

Combo	What's included	Out-of-pocket	Who pays
A larger employer can opt to self-insure, but still purchase additional insurance to cap their expenses in a catastrophic event.	Dental, vision, medical, wellness, preventative, etc.	The level of deductibles, co-payments, etc.	What percentage of the plan's cost is covered by employees, anywhere from 0 to 100 percent.

What Is This Thing Called The Motley Fool?

A List to Watch

Q How should I set up a stock watch list? — J.M., Seattle

A As you read about companies, jot down the firms you think you might like to invest in. Ideally, enter them into an online portfolio (such as at Yahoo! or AOL) so you can easily track their progress from week to week or month to month. Perhaps pretend that you bought one share of each at the price at which you first noticed the company. (That way you'll be able to quickly see how much it's risen or fallen since then.)

As time permits, research the companies on your list and get to know them well. When you're ready to buy, you'll be familiar with a bunch of firms and will be able to compare them to see which ones are the most promising. You'll also be able to notice when companies you like encounter temporary problems and fall significantly in price. As long as the problems seem temporary and not fatal (after some research), these can be attractive buying opportunities.

If need be, you can maintain a watch list on paper.

Q What are "defensive" stocks? — P.G., Ocala, Fla.

A Defensive stocks are tied to companies whose fortunes don't fluctuate too much in relation to the economy. During a recession, for example, people might put off purchasing cars or fur coats or washing machines, but they'll still be buying food, gasoline, prescription drugs, electricity, telephone service and diapers. Food, soft drinks, tobacco, energy and pharmaceuticals are defensive industries. They're seen as more stable than their "cyclical" counterparts, such as the homebuilding, steel, automobile and airline industries. Cyclical industries aren't necessarily to be avoided, but do expect a bumpier ride with them.

A Retirement-Wrecking Move

Our tough economy has been forcing people to make tough choices. According to a Time poll, 27 percent of Americans have withdrawn money from retirement or college savings accounts to cover some of their expenses. Unfortunately, that can do more long-term harm than short-term good.

The longer you leave your money alone to grow, the more powerful your compounded returns become. Check out what time, patience and an average 10 percent return can do to a steady series of $10,000 annual investments: After 10 years, you have $175,000. After 20 years, $630,000. After 30 years, $1.8 million.

You don't even need to be a financial wizard to score those kinds of returns. Broad-market index funds, such as those based on the S&P 500, have averaged 10 percent a year over the long haul. (In fairness, they could return more or less over your particular investing time frame.)

You could aim to juice up your basic returns by adding a handful of well-chosen individual stocks to your fund foundation. Check out the approximate average annual return over the past 20 years for some well-known names: Schwab, 24 percent; Lowe's, 19 percent; Nike, 17 percent; Colgate-Palmolive, 16 percent.

But remember — all your impressive gains can quickly fizzle if you start taking money out of your retirement accounts.

Suppose you take out $10,000 this year, 20 years from retirement, and you also fail to make your usual $10,000 investment. Despite your good intentions, you probably won't put in an extra $20,000 next year to compensate. So you'll lose what the $10,000 you withdrew would have grown to in 20 years (at 10 percent): a little more than $67,000. And then there's the additional $10,000 you would have invested, too: another $67,000 loss. You might pay some bills in the here and now, but your retirement could eventually end up more than $150,000 poorer. Is that worth it? So if possible, leave your money in your retirement accounts.

My Smartest Investment

Focus on Quality

My basic investing policy is to buy quality and hold on — that's why I now own mostly blue-chip, dividend-paying stocks, reinvesting my dividends and buying more shares when I can. Once in a while, one or two get into trouble. But I keep close tabs, and if I think they won't help my portfolio, I sell them. But most have performed very well. They got me through the dot-com bubble, mostly holding their own and recovering nicely. I believe we should NEVER be led by emotion when we invest. Study and know what and why you're buying, and have a lot of patience. Also, don't be too hard on yourself when you make a mistake — we all do, but hopefully we will learn from them. One more thing: I never take hot stock tips from friends or family — they always get me in trouble. — K.C., Calif.

Hasbro's on Sesame Street

Hasbro (NYSE: HAS) spanks larger rival Mattel on a quarterly basis, so why not wrestle away a key licensed property between quarterly financial updates?

Hasbro has inked a 10-year deal with Sesame Workshop, the Sesame Street creator. Beginning in 2011, Hasbro's Playskool will begin putting out licensed toys featuring Big Bird, Elmo, Cookie Monster and other popular characters.

Mattel is the company that consumers typically associate with Sesame Workshop characters, thanks to its acquisition of Tickle Me Elmo creator Tyco. Earlier this year, Mattel's CFO disclosed that the Sesame Street deal ranked among the top 10 licensing agreements in toyland.

Hasbro has been doing well through its licensed lines, but it's also been benefiting from the celluloid success of its Transformers and G.I. Joe franchises. Both lines' summer film releases helped move plenty of Hasbro-made playthings this holiday season.

Hasbro is also working with Discovery Communications to reposition Discovery's fledgling children's channel to better compete against Disney and Viacom's Nickelodeon. In a few years, Hasbro may very well be the next Marvel, as it milks its action stars, or a serious power broker in the kid-programming cable business.

Privacy fears delay better airport scanners

By Joelle Tessler and Arthur Max
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — High-tech security scanners that might have prevented the Christmas Day attempt to blow up a jetliner have been installed in only a small number of airports around the world, in large part because of privacy concerns over the way the machines see through clothing.

The body-scanning technology is in at least 19 U.S. airports, while European officials have generally limited it to test runs.

Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab, the Nigerian accused of trying to ignite explosives aboard a Northwest Airlines jet as it was coming in for a landing in Detroit, did not go through such a scan where his flight began, at Amsterdam's Schiphol airport.

The full-body scanner "could have been helpful in this case, absolutely," said Evert van Zwol, head of the Dutch Pilots Association.

But the technology has raised significant concerns among privacy watchdogs because it can show the body's contours with embarrassing clarity. Those fears have slowed the introduction of the machines.

Strip searchers

Jay Stanley, public education director for the American Civil Liberties Union's Technology and Liberty Program, said the machines essentially perform "virtual strip searches that see through your clothing and reveal the size and shape of your body."

Abdulmutallab passed through a routine security check at the gate in Amsterdam before boarding, officials said. He is believed to have tucked into his trousers or underwear a small bag holding PETN explosive powder, and possibly a liquid detonator.

Because such items won't set off metal detectors, the U.S. Transportation Security Administration, part of the Department of Homeland Security, has begun installing two types of advanced scanning machines that provide a more detailed picture.

These machines, which can cost six figures each, screen airline passengers without physical contact. They can reveal plastic or chemical explosives and non-metallic weapons.

Such scanners "provide the best protection for the widest range of threats," said Joe Reiss, vice president of marketing for American Science & Engineering Inc. The company makes machines for prisons, military agencies, foreign customs patrols and other customers but does not have a contract with TSA.

TSA has deployed 40 "millimeter wave" machines, which use radio waves to produce a three-dimensional image based on energy reflected back from the body.

Six of those machines, which are made by L-3 Communications Holdings Inc., are being used for what TSA calls "primary screenings" at six U.S. airports: Albuquerque, N.M.; Las Vegas; Miami; San Francisco; Salt Lake City; and Tulsa, Okla.

This means passengers go through the scans instead of a metal detector, although they can elect to receive a pat-down search from a security officer instead.

The remainder of the machines are being used at 13 U.S. airports for secondary screening of passengers who set off a metal detector: Atlanta; Baltimore/Washington; Denver; Dallas/Fort Worth; Indianapolis; Jacksonville and Tampa, Fla.; Los Angeles; Phoenix; Raleigh-Durham, N.C.; Richmond, Va.; Ronald Reagan Washington National; and Detroit. Travelers can opt for a pat-down instead in those instances as well.

'Backscatters'

The agency also says it has bought 150 "backscatter" machines, which use low-level X-rays to create a two-dimensional image of the body, from Rapiscan Systems, a unit of OSI Systems Inc. Those machines, which cost $190,000 each, are expected to be deployed in U.S. airports in 2010.

"The machine gives a very accurate and very precise image of things on the body that are not the body," said Peter Kant, executive vice president of global government affairs for Rapiscan.

Last June, however, because of privacy concerns, the House voted 310-118 to prohibit the use of whole-body imaging for primary screening. The measure, still pending in the Senate, would limit the use of the devices to secondary screening.

"As a society, we're going to have to figure out the balance between personal privacy and the need to secure an aircraft," said Rep. Jason Chaffetz, R-Utah, who sponsored the measure. "And there is no easy answer."

Executives at the companies that make the machines insist there are ways to strike that balance.

Kant said the technology has evolved enough to produce body images that look like chalk outlines. In addition, privacy filters can blur faces, noted Colin McSeveny, communications manager for Smiths Detection, a British company that makes millimeter wave machines that are being tested in Europe and the U.S.

For its part, TSA said it safeguards privacy by ensuring that all full-body images are viewed in a walled-off location not visible to the public.

In addition, the security officer assisting the passenger cannot view the image and the officer who views the image never sees the passenger. Also, the machines cannot store, print or transmit any images they produce.

After all, McSeveny said, "all they are looking for is something that shouldn't be there."

In addition to the scanning machines in place or recently purchased by TSA, the agency says it plans to buy 300 more.

The European Union Parliament, however, voted in October 2008 for more study of privacy before authorizing the machines' full deployment in European airports.

Amsterdam's airport has been running a test project with full-body scanners for three years, mainly for a few European flights.

One machine being tested there for the past five weeks, made by L-3, is designed to enhance passengers' privacy by having software, rather than a human, analyze the image generated by the scanner. If the software detects an anomaly — something strapped to a leg, for instance — it alerts a human screener to look at the person's leg directly.

"So nobody sees any images," said Ron Louwerse, the airport's chief of security. "The results are very, very good. I'm very confident about it."

In May, TSA abandoned "puffer machines" made by General Electric Co. and Smiths Detection, which blew air onto passengers to dislodge trace amounts of explosives. The government said the machines cost too much to maintain and regularly broke down when exposed to dirt or humidity. There are still 18 puffer machines deployed at U.S. airports.

Airport security technology may spot hidden explosives

Security scanners that use millimeter-wave technology transmit radio waves to produce a three-dimensional image based on energy reflected back from the body. The technology has created privacy concerns because it shows the contours of the body with great clarity.

String of bubbles marked 2000-09

By Tim Paradis
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A string of exploding investment bubbles that started with the dot-coms and ended with mortgages and oil dominated the years from 2000 to 2009. And it looks like the next decade will be no different.

It doesn't seem to matter to many hedge fund traders and other professional investors that the Standard & Poor's 500 index has turned in its first losing performance over the course of a decade, having fallen 23 percent from 1,469.25 at the start of 2000 to its current 1,126.20. Or that they or other investors helped create and then destroy the bubbles that left stocks worth $2.5 trillion less today than when the decade began — and that's before adding in the effects of inflation.

A mix of investor hubris, ignorance and piles of easy money created the bubbles. New ideas about where to invest seemed foolproof and greed crowded out doubts. Many investors looking for the best returns failed to see the potential problems with an Internet business that had no sales plan, or that thousands of expensive homes bought with no down payment might end up in foreclosure.

Now, these investors who fled the last blowups risk running smack into others. The Federal Reserve is keeping borrowing costs low to help revive the economy, and that means there's still plenty of easy money around, helping traders to inflate the price of everything from stocks to commodities such as gold.

"They've put out the biggest punch bowl in U.S. history and people are guzzling from it," said Haag Sherman, chief investment officer at Salient Partners in Houston.

It begs several questions: What will be the next bubble? Or is it already here? And, how do individual investors protect their savings?

Bubble?

Some analysts have already been asking if the stock market formed a bubble with its huge rebound this year. The S&P 500 is up 68.9 percent from the 12-year trading low of 666.79, its best performance since the 1930s.

Gold is also suspect. It's above $1,098 an ounce and up 24 percent in 2009. Other possible sources of bubbles include stocks in emerging markets such as China, where the Shanghai index is up 76.4 percent this year.

Analysts say it's in the DNA of markets to let ambition cloud good judgment and that even when investors learn or relearn a lesson about excess, many still forget it.

Moreover, investors still have $3.2 trillion in money market mutual funds that's waiting to be invested, according to iMoneyNet Inc. With so much cash available and investors hankering after big returns, analysts warn that bubbles may be inevitable.

The signs of effervescence can be hard to spot.

"Pets.com was going to have a market cap larger than Exxon Mobil," said David Darst, chief investment strategist for Morgan Stanley Smith Barney in New York, referring to the Web site that collapsed in November 2000, nine months after raising $82.5 million from investors.

He says investors will keep getting tripped up as they find new ways to invest.

"Human nature doesn't change," Darst said. "Market mechanisms change but human fear, human greed will be like this decades and centuries hence."

Numbers tell story

The numbers from this decade tell a stunning story:

● The Nasdaq composite index, powered by the dot-com buying that began in the late 1990s, went all the way up to 5,048.62 in March 2000, then crashed down to 1,114.11 at the depths of the 2002 bear market. It rose as high as 2,859.12 in October 2007, but no one expects it to return to its loftiest levels.

And the indexes don't reflect inflation, taxes and fees, which take the value of an investment down further. Thornburg Investment Management, which analyzed the value of investments beyond the decade, said $100 invested in 1978 would have been worth only $376 thirty years later after accounting for inflation, expenses and taxes.

● Crude oil, sparked by a weaker dollar and worries that oil producers would soon be unable to meet global demand, rose 71 percent in just six months to a high of $147.27 in July 2008. Prices then crashed down to $33.87 in just five months. The plunge was so precipitous that it destroyed several hedge funds that had bet oil would just keep soaring.

● Low borrowing rates and insatiable demand for mortgage debt by investors made it easy to get loans. That helped prop up housing prices and fuel speculation on securities based on those risky mortgages. The peak came in April 2006; after that, home prices fell 31.9 percent to a low in May 2009, according to the S&P/Case-Shiller 20-city index. Along the way, two investment banks that bought mortgage-backed securities collapsed and the government spent hundreds of billions of dollars to prop up many commercial banks.

● Prices for soybeans and corn hit record levels in the summer of 2008 as floods swept the Midwest and damaged key growing regions. In the first six months of the year, corn shot up more than 60 percent and soybeans rose more than 30 percent. The jump in prices was a boon to many traders, but led to food riots in Africa, Asia and the West Indies. By December of last year, both grains had lost half their value.

Remain vigilant

Analysts say the best way to avoid being caught by other bubbles is to remain vigilant about diversifying, the practice of investing in a variety of assets. It could also mean shedding some of the stronger performers to avoid some of the risks that the winners will falter.

"When something grows too big in the portfolio you have to force yourself to scale it back a little bit," Darst said. "There's no substitute for doing your homework, there's no substitute for asking questions."

By spreading their holdings around and saving more, investors can buffer against what many analysts worry will be the fallout from the low interest rates and easy money that are being used to help revive the economy.

Policymakers also have concerns. Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke said last month a policy favoring cheap borrowing risked setting more traps for investors. He said he didn't see any signs that a bubble is emerging but also acknowledged that it is "extraordinarily difficult" to detect one forming.

Some analysts see bubbles right now.

Quincy Krosby, market strategist for Prudential Financial is skeptical of gold's recent surge.

It's easy to see why gold could be in a bubble. Many investors who have bought gold are speculating that inflation will start rising because of all of the money coursing through the financial system. One of gold's greatest appeals is as a hedge against inflation.

"It will move up, but the music always stops," Krosby said of gold.

Simon Laing, a director at Newton Investment Management Ltd. in London, notes that investors are using money borrowed at low rates in the U.S. and Europe to buy stocks in other markets — raising the prospect of new bubbles.

This comes as causes of past bubbles still present obstacles.

"I don't think we've taken the medicine yet," he said. "We've had a decade of bubbles and I still think we're in the same scenario."

Krosby said individuals shouldn't be fooled into thinking that regulators have been able to curtail risk-taking in the past two years since the collapse of the market for securities based on iffy mortgages.

"They're playing in a world where professional traders dominate even though we think we've gone through this tremendous regulatory revolution," she said.

Decade of bursting investment bubbles

Analysts warn that even with lessons learned from the dot-com bust and the mortgage crisis, new bubbles could be forming.

No more writing checks in lifestyle change

By Anick Jesdanun
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It's been nine months since I've written a check.

That's not to say I'm on some 12-step program to resist shopping. My credit card bills would suggest otherwise. Rather, when I opened a new bank account in March, I challenged myself to see to how much I could use my bank's online bill-payment service to stretch the 10 starter checks I got for free.

Ordering a box of checks can cost $20 to $30, and in these tough times, every penny counts. I also save 44 cents in postage for most checks that go unwritten.

To my surprise, I haven't needed to use any of the 10 free checks all year.

I knew I wouldn't have trouble paying electricity, cable TV, phone or credit card bills. And for merchants, friends and others without prior electronic arrangements with my bank, Citibank, its bill-payment service simply prints out a check and mails it directly. I've done that with rent for my apartment, and so far I haven't been evicted.

Trouble could lie with bills that have payment slips to return.

Because Citibank's service — like those offered by other banks — sends checks or makes electronic transfers to merchants directly, there's no way to attach that slip.

I thought I'd encountered such a roadblock just a month into my experiment, as I needed to submit a form with some state tax payments. I prepared to pull out one of those precious starter checks. But then I noticed that New York state has a Web site for making electronic payments directly, without forms. Problem solved.

The solutions aren't always elegant, though.

Instead of handing my building's super a holiday tip, I had Citibank mail a check with "Merry Xmas" and my apartment number printed on the memo line. There wasn't enough space to use the nonreligious "Happy Holidays," and the bill-pay approach seems so impersonal. We'll see how quickly I get repairs done in the coming year.

Perhaps the most nonsensical check-free experience involved my registration for a marathon in Charlotte, N.C. I could have mailed in a form with my check for 44 cents postage. Instead, to conserve my 10 starter checks, I paid a $7 processing fee to submit it online.

I know, it might sound silly. But I've gotten so used to a check-free lifestyle over these past nine months that I couldn't bear the thought of writing one and mailing it in — and getting closer to having to pay for a box of checks.

I do miss getting canceled checks back, but banks have generally moved away from that anyhow, with or without electronic payments. Instead, many banks now let you view electronic images of canceled checks online.

For electronic payments and transfers, Citibank lets you view records online for about four months. After that, you'd have to rely on the brief listings in the monthly statements or contact customer service for more detailed records. But I was glad to learn that option would remain available even after I closed my account.

My one disappointment with online bill payment is over what's known as the float.

Normally, I would get to keep my money for several days while a check got mailed and cashed. If a friend procrastinated, the money could remain mine for weeks or months.

With Citibank's service, the money is taken out of my account as soon as the bank sends the payment. Citibank uses the interest earned during that period to cover costs of running the service.

Not all banks do this, though — some will deduct the funds from your account when the recipient gets the payment. And we're really just talking about a few pennies here, not enough to offset the convenience of online bill payment.

It's become such a lifestyle change that I have now gone paperless with many other accounts as well. Credit card and cable TV statements are now delivered electronically, after years of my resisting nagging by those companies.

It got me wondering: What's the point of checks in this era of credit cards, PayPal and electronic transfers? Many merchants don't even accept personal checks anymore.

The biggest test of my check-free devotion came when I called Citibank to find out just how much a box of checks would cost — only to learn they come for free at my account level.

As much as I love free, my reply was still: No, thanks.

Cambridge sale right deal for HPI

ONE of the immediate benefits in the sale of the Cambridge Square Apartments by Senior Center Services was that the revenue from the exchange took the organization over the top in its fund drive to build the Mill Race Community Center.

There were other beneficiaries as well, not the least of which would be residents of the 70-unit facility.

The Issue:
Sale of apartment complex to Housing Partnerships Inc.

Our Position:
HPI is a more comfortable fit in the landlord role, and the organization has background and resources to improve quality of life for residents.

Officials of Housing Partnerships Inc., which purchased the property, reported that they plan to invest at least $2 million in improvements after the sale is finalized.

HPI officials do not anticipate the cost of the improvements will affect what the residents pay in rent although increases could be applied to the housing assistance more than 70 percent of them receive.

The complex was undertaken by Senior Center Services in 1968 to provide reasonably priced housing to low- and moderate-income seniors.

While it has filled that need over the years, there have been some who questioned whether an organization such as Senior Center Services should be put in the role of landlord.

Today only 20 or so of the residents of the complex are seniors.

The reality, of course, was that there was no such thing as Housing Partnerships in 1968.

Now there is, and it is an organization that has compiled an impressive record in building, buying, renting and even selling properties to individuals with low to moderate incomes.

More importantly, they have also developed the resources to maintain properties of this nature.

Although HPI has principally been involved with houses, it does have a track record in apartment restoration and management.

One area undertaken by the organization was the transformation of the Seventh Street Armory into an apartment building.

The investment that is being made in the Cambridge Square Apartments will obviously benefit the residents, but it should also have a positive effect on the community as a whole.

Resolutions ingrained in U.S. fabric

Bob Gustin

WHAT is it about the new year that makes us want to make impossible resolutions we cannot possibly live up to, year after year?

I've had my share over the years, mostly the usual: Lose 20 pounds. Or 40. Exercise more. Keep my workspace spartan. Keep my work e-mail under control so the administrator won't send continuous reminders I'm over my limit, thereby exacerbating the problem.

Do more housework. Get the garage/closet/basement/pole barn organized. Quit buying useless knickknacks, geegaws and chotskies. Conquer clutter. Save more money. Read more books, watch less television. Give more, be more.

It's the time of year we buy big plastic tubs and take donations to Sans Souci. Out with anything we haven't used in the past year. Right.

My intentions are good. Sometimes the effort even carries on into February.

But I can think of few, if any, New Year's resolutions that have resulted in a long-term change in my behavior.

Still, each year about this time I vow to do better.

I think it's ingrained behavior, reflecting Americans' love of new beginnings.

This nation of (mostly) immigrants was born on the hope for new and better beginnings. Our relentless trek westward was driven by promise. The old Horatio Alger myth tells us that if we just turn over a new leaf and try hard enough, anything is possible.

Many religions are centered on the premise that we can all have a new beginning, that old wrongs can be forgiven.

Maybe we're dissatisfied with the status quo. Maybe it's that the future (or the past, depending on your makeup) looks better than the future.

That said, there are a couple of things I'm planning to change in The Republic.

- Page 3 of the Sunday business section, which has been anchored by a block of statistics on the past week's stock market activity, is one of those. The space will still be dedicated to local, national and world business, but our goal will be to make it broader and more readable — stories instead of numbers — and more appealing, with graphics instead of gray.
- We're working to replace the syndicated package of NASCAR stories and graphics we've been running in Friday's paper under the "That's Racin'" banner with a more localized package of stories and photos. The space will still be dedicated to NASCAR but with different content and format.
- We want to use our space more efficiently on Page 1, so we're looking at changes in the design at the bottom of the page, which promotes features on the Web and inside the paper. Again, it will still be there, just in a different format.
- Likewise, we've talked about making some changes on Page 2 of the daily paper to give it a better presentation. Stay tuned.
- I keep thinking it's time to update or change some of our comics, especially the ones in the Sunday paper. Each time we do that, a small vocal band of fans for specific comic strips let their feelings be known. So if you have a favorite, let me know now, before I do something rash.

Is America deterring terrorism to fullest?

Joel Mathis/Ben Boychuk

Is airline security impossible? A bomb aboard Northwest/Delta Airlines Flight 253 fizzled out on Christmas Day, but controversy exploded afterward when Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano declared: "The system worked." That statement flew in the face of revelations U.S. authorities had been tipped off to the bomber's radical inclinations — and failed to prevent him from boarding the plane. Even President Barack Obama declared a "systemic failure" had occurred.

Meanwhile, federal officials unveiled a new set of rules for international flights into the United States: No bathroom visits and no laptop blankets during the last hour of a trip. Full-body scanners that peer through clothing are also being considered.

Are America's national security institutions successfully deterring terrorism? Or has the country been blessed with eight years of dumb luck? Joel Mathis and Ben Boychuk, the RedBlueAmerica columnists, jump into the fray.

By Joel Mathis

SINCE Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab got on Flight 253 despite warnings about the danger he represented, nobody can credibly say "the system worked."

But adding silly new layers of rules on top of the already-ailing system probably won't do much to increase security — and will do a lot to needlessly inconvenience Americans and other air travelers. We'd be better served fixing the airline security system that we have instead of making it more complicated, invasive and burdensome.

We should be realistic, however. It's possible, even likely, that everybody in the national security system will do their job effectively as it can possibly be done and that al Qaida will still one day succeed in an attack on the United States. We cannot and will not create immunity from terror; the best we can hope for is to treat it and mitigate its effects as much as possible — in much the same way, say, that HIV/AIDS is treated today as a chronic-but-not-necessarily-fatal condition.

In that vein, it's worth noting that the alleged failed attack by Abdulmutallab reveals the bankruptcy and wastefulness of Obama's "defeat al-Qaida by occupying Afghanistan" strategy. Al-Qaeda can go wherever it wants to go, and it does. In this case, the operation was launched from Yemen.

Abdulmutallab was reportedly radicalized during schooling in Great Britain. Yet there are — quite rightly — no suggestions the U.S. invade Yemen or the United Kingdom. A state-centric solution to disrupting and defeating non-state actors is doomed to fail because terrorists don't need the state. Like the crazy new airline rules, the war in Afghanistan amounts to using a sledgehammer to swat a fly that's not even in the same room.

By Ben Boychuk

THE "system worked" because the system, as Janet Napolitano understands it, functions according to standards and "metrics" that only career bureaucrats and politicians would find acceptable.

Everyone else knows the system failed utterly on Christmas Day and no policy fix or overhaul will remedy what has ailed our national security since 9/11.

The desire to point fingers at the current administration is appealing but insufficient. True, Obama ran for election promising a different approach to fighting the war on terrorism. One of the first things his administration did was to jettison the term "war on terrorism" for even less precise terms, such as "man-made disasters."

But even though Obama's failures are manifest, he doesn't deserve all of the blame. Years after Congress "reformed intelligence" by creating yet another layer of bureaucracy in the form of the director of National Intelligence, we still can't "connect the dots" from radicals training abroad to terrorists boarding planes wearing explosive underwear.

The press now reports that U.S intelligence agencies "knew al-Qaida was promising a Christmas surprise" and that the CIA was tracking Abdulmutallab for months, but couldn't put together the details to stop him from boarding the flight from Amsterdam to Detroit in time. Why not?

"Ultimately," says Ishmael Jones, a pseudonymous ex-CIA officer and author of a book detailing U.S. intelligence failures, "there are simply so many managers and administrators, in so many separate and loosely organized chains of command, that acquiring the intelligence is a stroke of luck, and getting it to where it needs to go, on time, is almost impossible."

What we have is a massive federal government that does a great job of wasting billions of taxpayer dollars to maintain the illusion of security.

What we need is a government that worries less about treating every airline passenger as a suspect or offending the sensibilities of foreigners and concentrates more on saying no to people from countries that would do us harm. We need to take our enemies threats seriously. We need to act like we're at war.

Hispanics finally get noticed politically in 2010

IN the annals of U.S. social life, 2009 will go down as a turning point for Hispanics.

Fifty-seven years ago, the election of Dwight Eisenhower marked the first mainstream recognition of Hispanics as a constituency in presidential elections.

The 1960 election of John F. Kennedy, when Mexican Americans played a major role in turning Texas, demonstrated the pivotal role some Latino groups could play in presidential contests.

In 1975, President Gerald Ford allowed an amended Civil Rights Act to cross his desk. It included the Southwestern states, where widespread voter abuse, intimidation and disenfranchisement were legendary.

Jose de la Isla

In 1976, Latinos were major contributors to the election of Jimmy Carter in Texas and in Ohio.

During the decades since the 1950s, the Latino population was changing — by age, education, ethnicities, national origin, geographical spread and religious affiliations. Individual issues segmented the Hispanic identity but not the understanding of itself as a community, a constituency, and a source for leadership.

Yet in 2006, when Republicans in Congress unleashed a brutal anti-immigrant bill intending to criminalize individuals and to split families apart by place of birth and punish people who rendered aid to those in distress, more than immigration was on the line.

It was a fundamental challenge to U.S. values, as much as torture had been. The pogrom-like proposal — officially encouraging persecution — will fill future textbooks about the reckless abandon of the early 2000s.

Some of the pogrom's enthusiasm was curbed by the fledgling election successes of Latinos in municipalities, state government and Congress, much of which was made possible by the Civil Rights Act.

During this time, middle-class Hispanics, who were forgetting old grievances about ethnic and social-status prejudices, were jolted back to reality. They saw how discriminatory practices were expressed through licensing drivers, renting homes, liability insurance, schooling, profiling and job applications to further disadvantage immigrants, documented as well as undocumented.

Sanctions intended for the poor and the downtrodden affected how most all Latinos were perceived. The Latino middle class had to rethink its standing in the community. It was not immune from anachronistic stereotyping and just plain ignorance by many fellow citizens who seemed to have autistic trouble perceiving outside their narrow habitats. The prejudice their parents and grandparents had talked about was back.

That was the great eye-opener after the election of 2004. Latino constituencies decided not to give their vote away to double-crossing political parties.

This is a different country now. Today 5,129 Latinos hold elective or appointive public office. They have many thousands of colleagues with whom to form political alliances. Things went too far in the first decade of the 2000s.

That was the tension when Barack Obama swept into office in 2008 with the highest Latino voter participation yet. It carried with it several pivotal states. Although Latinos had helped elect presidents before, this was the first time many in the media noticed.

The 2009 nomination and confirmation of Sonya Sotomayor to the U.S. Supreme Court completed some unfinished business at the highest level.

For more than five decades, a bedrock community goal has been about having its values and perspectives represented in adequate proportions in the chambers of government. The concept is as fundamental as democracy itself.

Now that the precedent for a representative foundation has been laid, it's time to begin.

United Way of Bartholomew County President Doug Otto speaks at a meeting with member agencies at Columbus City Hall, Monday.

The call of fame?

United Way of Bartholomew County President Doug Otto joked at a recent meeting about his appearances on area television stations covering the fire that damaged the home of 37 agencies Christmas Eve.

"I've had half a dozen calls from agents in Hollywood," said Otto with a grin. "The William Morris agency called. So I may not be with you to see this (recovery) through."

The lighthearted remark drew good-natured laughter.

Right-hand woman

Comedic illusionist Jonny Magic admits he can't do it all on his own.

He and his wife, Krista, work full-time as a magician and magician's assistant. But she never steps onstage to magically vanish or be cut in half.

"She does the bookings, media stuff, scheduling, makes sure my pants are ironed, that sort of thing," Jonny Magic said.

That's a lot of water

At Monday's meeting regarding the United Way building fire and the agencies affected, people inquired when they could enter their agency offices to see what was salvageable.

They were told that if items didn't suffer fire or smoke damage, they suffered water damage.

United Way of Bartholomew County President Doug Otto said he was told by firefighters that they sprayed 1,500 gallons of water per minute from five hoses for 24 hours on the building.

Safe during hunting?

Two Columbus brothers, who each live near woods, received blaze orange jackets for Christmas from their mother to keep them safe from hunters.

The third brother, who lives in a subdivision, jokingly asked where his jacket was.

"Mom got you a deer-skin jacket," one of the other brothers said, chuckling. "And a helmet with antlers."

Tough old bird

Recently a Bartholomew County Sheriff's Department had a run-in with some of the local wildlife while patrolling a county road.

The deputy reported that a large bird flew in front of his squad car one December night.

His car's sideview mirror was knocked off in the ensuing collision.

After a few minutes of searching in the dark, the deputy located the bird — an owl.

Initially, it appeared the bird did not survive the collision. However, the owl came to a short time later with an injured wing.

The deputy then saw that the bird got the appropriate medical attention.

Sharon Drach Mangas

THE ornaments are wrapped and boxed; tucked away 'til next Christmas. The last cookie crumbs have been gobbled up in a final feeding-frenzy. The new year lies ahead, shimmering like a fresh snowfall, beckoning me to clean my slate and make changes.

Time for the annual resolutions: lose weight, laugh more, get organized and quit giving my adult children unsolicited advice. Every year it's the same handful of hopeful promises. They fall by the wayside in nothing flat. Just ask my children.

Perhaps, in best Hoosier fashion, I don't do well with resolutions 'cause I'm stubbornly resistant to change. Or maybe it's my age. Edging closer to my sixth decade, I'm at a crossroads. Time is going faster, and I'm moving slower. Changes are rapid. Maybe it's time to pass the mantle on to the next generation of whippersnappers who have the energy and smarts to take us to the next level. These days, I'm just along for the ride.

I guess it's the same for every generation. I'm envisioning a summer day around 1927. My great-grandfather takes a break from mowing hay in southwest Indiana.

He reaches in the pocket of his overalls for his handkerchief, removes his old straw hat, wipes his brow, fishes out a pocketwatch to check the time and gives a reassuring pat to his sturdy plow horse.

Bessie whinnies and presses her muzzle into great-grandpa's weathered hand. Suddenly, an unwelcome intrusion breaks the pastoral silence.

A Model-T comes lumbering down the country lane. As the new-fangled machine bumps and clatters past the hay field, my great-grandfather gives a friendly wave to the young driver, but turns to Bessie and shakes his head:

"Don't that beat all. Who in tarnation would want one of them horseless carriages? Old girl, I'm bettin' the whippersnapper drivin' that thing will have it stuck in the mud before he makes it to Alfordsville. Take a look yonder now Bessie 'cause that rattletrap's a passing fad." Of course, Henry Ford had other things in mind.

So, I'm standing in that field right now. Bill Gates and the boys from Google have taken the place of Henry Ford. They're rockin' my world, and I'm not sure I like it. I'm 58, and anxious to hold on to what feels comfortable and familiar. In my little corner of the world, there are certain ceremonies of life that should be sacred. Does everything have to be wedded to cyberspace?

I like the crackle and feel of a newspaper. It's part of my morning ritual; opening my front door, scooping the paper off the porch and reading the local news while drinking my first cup of coffee. It's a love affair I don't want to see end. But my kids and their co-horts read all their news online. "Real" newspapers are passé for their generation.

Books have always been a sensory experience for me. I admire cover artwork, smoothing the slick paper with my fingers. Turning a book over in my hands, I can feel the weight and heft of the story.

I flip through the pages and sense the possibility of what's inside, breathing in that new book smell.

If Kindles (electronic book readers) are the wave of the future, can virtual libraries be far behind? Gutenberg is rolling over in his grave.

So, it's 2010. My resolutions? I'll make an effort to embrace change, while holding on as long as I can to a few cherished traditions. When the time is right, I'll try to be graceful and let the new generation lead the way.

But kids, you can keep your Kindles. If you're looking for me, I'll be curled up on the couch with a "real" book … or sitting at the kitchen table, cup of coffee in hand, rattling my newspaper.

At least for as long as you'll let me. Happy New Year!

Real security means looking for terrorists

Clifford May

SEVERAL hundred men, women and children will live to see the new year thanks to good luck: The terrorist on Delta/Northwest Flight 253 from Amsterdam to Detroit was inadequately trained, and one passenger turned out to be remarkably quick-thinking and courageous.

But a multibillion-dollar government security system failed. The question now: Is the Obama administration smart enough to go to school on this attack? Among the lessons that need to be learned are these:

Real security means looking for terrorists — not for weapons. In this case, it should have been easy: Alhaji Umaru Mutallab, a prominent Nigerian banker, alerted U.S. Embassy officials that his son, Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab, had become radicalized. That ought to have led to the revocation of Abdulmuttalab's multiple-entry visa to the U.S., his inclusion on the "no-fly" list or, at the very least, to thorough screening before he was allowed to board a plane bound for Detroit.

More broadly: Does looking for terrorists rather than weapons mean we need to profile? Yes, but we're not talking about racial profiling, we're talking about terrorist profiling — identifying the characteristics, behavioral patterns and background that terrorists often share.

For example, it has been reported that Abdulmutallab paid cash for his ticket and checked no baggage. Surely, that should have raised suspicions and prompted someone to question him. A 23-year-old planning to die on Christmas Day 2009 may not have come up with a great answer when asked about his plans for 2010.

It's reasonable to assume that anyone who has spent time in countries where terrorists are known to train and operate represents an increased risk. Abdulmutallab was in Yemen from August to early December 2009, according to the Yemeni government. How difficult would it have been for authorities to learn this?

Terrorism is not a criminal justice matter; it is a weapon of asymmetric warfare. No one has been more persuasive and eloquent on this issue than Andrew C. McCarthy, who was America's most successful anti-terrorism prosecutor: It was he who locked up the Blind Sheikh, Omar Abdel Rahman and other perpetrators of the first World Trade Center bombing. But McCarthy came to realize that even the toughest lawyers cannot win a war against determined terrorist organizations (e.g. al-Qaeda and Hezbollah) and regimes (e.g. Iran's rulers).

As McCarthy explains in his landmark book, "Willful Blindness," we accept a certain level of criminal activity within American society. We realize that some criminals will escape punishment because their guilt cannot be proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

Viewing terrorism through this same prism, however, means accepting that planes will be blown up and that other forms of mass casualty violence — bio-terrorism, Fort Hood-style massacres, dirty bomb attacks — also will occur; that terrorists can never be aggressively interrogated even if hundreds of lives depend on the information they might reveal; and that some terrorists will be allowed to walk, to rejoin the jihad, to thumb their noses at the families of their victims; and that we will never make a serious attempt to defeat those waging war against us.

We can't make ourselves inoffensive to militant Islamists. President Barack Obama's Cairo speech, his outreach to Iran's ruling mullahs, his pledge to close Guantanamo, his ban on coercive interrogations, his multi-cultural family history — none of this has had the slightest impact on those dedicated to waging holy war against what they see as the "Satanic" West.

Our enemies have many grievances from our support of Israel to our interventions in Iraq and Afghanistan to our laissez-faire attitudes toward women and homosexuals. Nothing we do to appease them will be enough because what they really want is to humiliate, defeat and dominate us. They say that clearly.

To take just one example, on Dec. 28, "al-Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula" posted a statement on the jihadi Web site Shumukh Al-Islam. It claimed responsibility for the Christmas Day attack and promised more terrorism to come. The statement added:

"We will continue in this path, Allah willing, until we reach our goal so that religion is all Allah's."

Is that really so hard to understand?

Court nixes lawsuit by Holocaust survivors

EUROPE

VATICAN CITY

VATICAN CITY — An American appeals court has dismissed a lawsuit by Holocaust survivors who allege the Vatican Bank accepted millions of dollars of their valuables stolen by Nazi sympathizers.

The 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco upheld a lower court ruling that said the Vatican Bank was immune from such a lawsuit under the 1976 Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, which generally protects foreign countries from being sued in U.S. courts.

Holocaust survivors from Croatia, Ukraine and Yugoslavia had filed suit against the Vatican Bank in 1999, alleging that it stored and laundered the looted assets of thousands of Jews, Serbs and Gypsies who were killed or captured by the Nazi-backed Ustasha regime that controlled Croatia.

Picasso's 'Little Guitar'

ROME — Police say they have recovered from a Roman businessman Picasso's "Little Guitar" toy sculpture made for the artist's daughter Paloma.

Carabinieri police say Picasso had given the toy to his friend, Italian artist Giuseppe Vittorio Parisi. Parisi lent it to the businessman two years ago to build a glass showcase for it to be exhibited at the civic museum on Lake Maggiore.

But police say the unnamed businessman never returned the work, keeping it in a shoe box in his home in Pomezia. Parisi died in January. His widow alerted police that the "Little Guitar" was still in the hands of the businessman.

'Picard' knighted

LONDON — There's an especially starry knight in Britain's latest round of royal honors.

Patrick Stewart — "Star Trek: The Next Generation's" Capt. Jean-Luc Picard — becomes Sir Patrick in Queen Elizabeth II's New Year honors list, which also includes a knighthood for theater and film director Nicholas Hytner.

"This is an honor that embraces those actors, directors and creative teams who have in these recent years helped fill my life with inspiration, companionship and sheer fun," said 69-year-old Stewart, who recently returned to the British stage after a long career in Hollywood that included playing Professor Charles Xavier in three "X-Men" films.

Probing Auschwitz theft

WARSAW — Poland will seek Sweden's help formally in investigating the theft of the "Arbeit Macht Frei" ("Work Sets You Free") sign from the Auschwitz memorial, confirming that Polish authorities suspect a Swedish link in the crime.

Boguslawa Marcinkowska, a spokeswoman for Krakow prosecutors, says her office will send a formal request for help to the Swedish Justice Ministry in Stockholm.

Polish media have been reporting that the theft was commissioned by a collector living in Sweden, but investigators have not confirmed that.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA

Stung by jellyfish

ADELAIDE — Trouble struck paradise this week when a British man who has the "Best Job in the World" as the caretaker of a tropical Australian island was stung by a potentially lethal jellyfish.

Ben Southall — who won a contest to blog for six months about life on Australia's Hamilton Island to promote tourism — wrote Tuesday that he was lucky to have survived his brush with the extremely venomous Irukandji jellyfish.

Earlier this week, Southall was getting off a Jet Ski in the ocean when he felt "a small bee-like sting" on his arm. When he later noticed a tingling in his hands and feet, island staff took Southall immediately to the doctor.

Progressive symptoms of fever, headache, lower back pain, chest tightness and high blood pressure led the doctor to diagnose that Southall had been stung by an Irukandji jellyfish. He was treated with antibiotics and slept off the venom's effects overnight.

MEXICO

6 suspended for photos

MEXICO CITY — Six forensics workers in Mexico have been suspended for altering a crime scene in which slain drug lord Arturo Beltran Leyva was photographed with bloodstained money laid out across his bullet-ridden body, an official said.

A spokesman for prosecutors in the central state of Morelos said the workers claimed a federal official they did not name ordered them to change the scene. The spokesman is not authorized to be quoted by name because of department policy.

Beltran Leyva was killed along with six associates Dec. 16 in a shootout with Marines.

CANADA

Intel limitations

TORONTO — Canada's top counterterrorism official says Canada has significant limitations in its ability to share information about potential terrorist suspects with other countries.

Public Safety Minister Peter Van Loan made the comment when asked if Canada has ever shared information about potential terror suspects with Yemen, a largely lawless country that is now a key stronghold for al-Qaida. Yemen's government says the United States should have shared its warnings about the Nigerian suspect in the botched Christmas Day airline attack.

Van Loan says sharing information is a sensitive subject following public inquiries that found that Canadian officials contributed to the torture of Canadians in Syria and Egypt by sharing information — including unfounded accounts of extremist links — with foreign agencies.

COLOMBIA

Commander detained

BOGOTA — Colombian prosecutors ordered the preventative detention of a paramilitary commander in the slaying of a journalist seven years ago in the violent eastern state of Arauca.

Gunmen killed Luis Eduardo Alfonso Parada, who worked for Radio Meridiano-70 and the leading newspaper El Tiempo, outside his office in 2003. Alfonso had reported on alleged corruption in Arauca and said he was receiving death threats.

Gustavo Reyes, head of the Prosecutors' Office unit investigating attacks on journalists, said Jose Ruben Pena Tobon acknowledged he was commander at the time of the right-wing paramilitary bloc that killed Alfonso.

Preventative detention is ordered in Colombia when sufficient evidence links a suspect to a crime. Reyes said Pena had not yet told prosecutors the motive for the journalist's killing.

Coca eradication down

BOGOTA — Colombia said it has fallen short of its goal for eradicating coca crops this year, blaming it on violent reactions from drug traffickers and budget problems despite having received billions of dollars in U.S. aid.

This year nearly 232 square miles were eradicated manually in Colombia, about 39 square miles short of the government's goal, national police director Gen. Oscar Naranjo said. That was a decline from last year's record manual eradication of nearly 371 square miles.

Naranjo said 17 police and four workers were killed while destroying crops. Authorities cleared land mines from 53 coca fields, and dozens of people were injured in clashes that broke out during crop-destruction efforts, he said.

Chavez: Coup would fail

CARACAS — Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez is looking to 2010 facing a recession, trying to prevent widespread power outages, and warning his opponents against a coup attempt.

Chavez said in a televised speech Wednesday that any action like the failed military rebellion against him in 2002 wouldn't have a chance.

"If something like that occurs to you, our counterattack is going to be firm. I'm warning you," Chavez said.

The leftist leader, who has consolidated power in the years since the short-lived 2002 coup, said if opponents wanted to try again "they'd have to import an armed force." MOGADISHU — U.S. officials are investigating a Somali man's alleged attempt to board a flight bound for Djibouti and Dubai last month carrying chemicals, liquid and a syringe in a case bearing chilling echoes of the plot to blow up a Detroit-bound airliner on Christmas Day.

Terrorism analysts said the arrest in Mogadishu, the Somali capital, could prove highly valuable for the Detroit investigation if the incidents turn out to be linked.

The Somali was arrested by African Union peacekeeping troops Nov. 13 before boarding the Daallo Airlines plane bound for the northern Somali city of Hargeisa, then Djibouti and Dubai.

Life in Brief

Sweet treat

So maybe you can have your New Year's resolutions and your cake, too. This recipe from Alicia Silverstone's "The Kind Diet" is whole grain and vegan, but tastes decadent.

COFFEE FUDGE BROWNIES

Start to finish: 2½ hours (20 minutes active)

Servings: 12

For the brownies:

3/4 cup whole-wheat pastry flour

3/4 cup brown rice flour

½ cup unsweetened cocoa powder

1 teaspoon baking powder

1½ teaspoons baking soda

1 teaspoon salt

1½ cups maple sugar

3/4 cup soy/rice milk blend (or any nondairy milk)

3/4 cup brewed decaf coffee

½ cup canola oil

½ cup walnuts, toasted and chopped

For the glaze:

1½ cups grain-sweetened, nondairy chocolate or carob chips

½ cup Earth Balance (or other vegan) butter

Heat the oven to 325 F. Coat an 8- or 9-inch-square baking pan with oil or cooking spray.

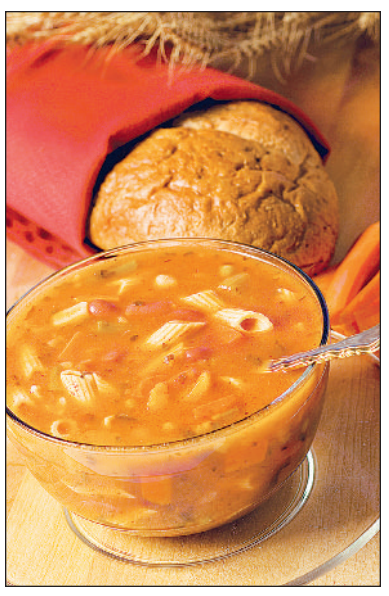
In a large bowl, sift together both flours, the cocoa powder, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Stir in the maple sugar.

In a separate bowl, stir together the milk, coffee and oil. Add the wet ingredients to the dry ingredients, and stir to mix well. Stir in the walnuts, then pour the batter into the prepared pan. Bake for 25 to 30 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted at the center comes out clean.

Place the pan on a wire rack to cool completely.

Once the brownies have cooled, prepare the glaze. In a small saucepan bring about 1 inch of water to a boil. Set a stainless steel bowl over it. Add the chocolate chips and butter to the bowl and stir until melted and smooth.

Pour the warm glaze over the entire pan of brownies, smoothing it over the surface. Chill until the glaze has set, about 1 hour.



Healthy bulk

Eating less isn't the only way to weigh less.

While starving yourself can help you shed pounds, it isn't healthy and will only leave you with stronger cravings that you're more likely to cave in on than if you had eaten a moderate, balanced and healthy diet.

The key to losing weight and staying satisfied is to eat foods that are low in calories but high in bulk and fiber, such as vegetables, whole grains (such as pasta and rice) and low-fat soups.

Brown Co. grad moves up skating ranks

By Brenda Showalter

Heather Lawless remembers the long hours she spent on the ice at Hamilton Center as a teen, perfecting her skating routines for competitions.

"I had a true passion for ice skating," said the 1997 Brown County High School graduate, who was at practice by 6 a.m. and often returned after school for more training.

"It's a challenging sport, and takes a lot of dedication," she said.

Lawless' mother, Judith Lawless, said her daughter would wake her up at 5:30 a.m. to drive from Nashville to Columbus.

"She had to love it to do that," said Judith Lawless, who admired her daughter's dedication and discipline.

Lawless started skating at age 9 after watching skaters, including Germany's gold-medal winner Katarina Witt, on television in the 1988 Olympics.

Her love for the sport continued at Indiana University, where she studied ice skating and sports management so she could become a skating coach after graduation.

This fall she moved up the ranks in the sport when she was named a technical specialist with the International Skating Union.

Lawless, who lives in Munich, Germany, works as an official helping judges at skating competitions around Europe.

Her role involves closely watching skaters as they compete to track all of the skating elements which are required for a competition.

"I look for the elements skaters perform and assign a level of difficulty," Lawless explained.

Her information is relayed via computer to the judging panel which gives scores to the skaters.

The job involves never taking her eyes off of the skaters during their four-minute routines.

"You can't look down," Lawless said with a smile.

L.A. lawyers table objections to make music

Editor's Note: Doug Showalter will return next week.

By John Rogers
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — If a defense attorney, a prosecutor and a judge were to walk into a music hall what would be the first thing they'd do?

"Spend a half-hour arguing legal motions," veteran Los Angeles lawyer David Waller says one of his colleagues told him when he learned Waller would be toting his cello to a rehearsal of the fledgling Los Angeles Lawyers Philharmonic Orchestra.

But there was no time for that on this night.

The orchestra had just two hours to run through Johannes Brahms' "Hungarian Dance No. 5," Edvard Grieg's "Triumphal March" and a rousing John Philip Sousa number, followed by a couple more classical and pops pieces.

In just a few days the group's 60-plus members would be decked out in black tie, playing their biggest gig to date — the grand opening of the Los Angeles County Bar Association's new downtown office. Not that anyone in the ensemble of brass, woodwind, string and percussion sections seemed to be showing any nervousness.

"We're not just a bunch of lawyers playing music. We're actually a good orchestra," maestro Gary S. Greene, who organized the ensemble earlier this year, said confidently before putting his players through their paces.

Greene, a litigation attorney, didn't threaten to sue anyone who intruded on anyone else's solo. But he did bring his baton down quickly whenever various musicians wandered off to the beat of their own drummer during the rehearsal at Wilshire United Methodist Church, a cavernous but acoustically stunning old cathedral in a particularly tony section of Los Angeles' west side.

After working two years as a technical specialist, Lawless can train to work at the Olympics and the world skating championships.

Prestigious position

"There's such a small number of officials at that level," said Lawless' former Columbus skating coach, Elizabeth Fernandes.

"It's a very important job. I'm really proud of her to have come from Columbus."

Fernandes remembers Lawless as being very passionate about skating and how much she enjoyed it.

Lawless' new role allows her to share her knowledge and love of the sport with others while maintaining her coaching career in Germany.

Fernandes likes that she has a friend who keeps abreast of the latest in the sport and can give her expert advice when she has technical questions about judging issues.

"Her job is very important, especially with the rule changes in the sport," Fernandes said.

Indiana roots

Lawless, the daughter of Robert and Judith Lawless of Nashville, tries to come home for a visit twice a year after moving to Germany to be with her boyfriend, a physicist.

She enjoys returning to Hamilton Center to talk with her friends and former coaches and to encourage young skaters.

Lawless said she now can truly appreciate the Columbus skating facilities and quality of coaching.

In Munich, Lawless coaches skaters of all ages and skill levels in a sport which she calls "a sport for all ages."

Janice Kotnik, whose daughter, Kacie, trains with the Lincoln Center Figure Skating Club, said she appreciated that Lawless visited Hamilton Center this summer and helped Kacie with her triple jumps.

"I appreciate her knowledge and coaching skills," Janice Kotnik said.

Lawless' job with the International Skating Union is a voluntary position, but she said she enjoys being able to give back to the sport that she loves so much.

"I can't imagine doing anything else," Lawless said. "I love going to work every day."

Wedding Q&A

Q: After we get home from our honeymoon, his mother wants to host a party for all the people we couldn't afford to invite to the wedding. I'm worried guests will think they're expected to give gifts, and I'm not comfortable with that. Can I ask her not to throw the party?

A: Yes, it's OK to politely ask your future mother-in-law to nix any ideas of throwing you a party. If she stands her ground, though, it's not worth a war. She means well, so just insist that she makes it clear that guests shouldn't bring presents. Otherwise, it does make it look like you (and your mother-in-law) are grabbing for gifts. Plus, it may be awkward if she invites anyone you actually did invite to the wedding, because the person most likely would have already given you one.

BAGHDAD — You won't find Iraq listed as a Top 10 honeymoon destination in the glossy pages of any bridal magazine, but there's nowhere else newlyweds Miguel and Amanda Perez would rather be right now.

"I like to think about it like it's the military sending us on a vacation," joked Miguel, a 24-year-old sergeant from Houston. "Sand and palm trees everywhere — a nine-month honeymoon."

The Perezes are one of six married couples who deployed to Iraq with the 72nd Infantry Brigade Combat Team, a Texas Army National Guard unit headquartered in Houston. About 3,000 soldiers from the brigade are stationed across the country, assigned to missions such as Green Zone security, detainee operations, force protection and convoys.

Both Perezes served in Iraq before. Miguel deployed from 2006-07. Amanda deployed from 2008-09.

"We know what the military expects of us, and we know that the military has to come first," said Amanda, a 23-year-old specialist from Beaumont.

With an increasing number of women serving on the front lines in Iraq and Afghanistan — about 10 percent of the 72nd's soldiers are female — married life has become a reality of military deployments.

Amanda and Miguel met in the Guard and married at a courthouse on Oct. 2, during a break in training. Since then, they've lived in group tents or barracks separated by gender, only seeing each other for a few hours each day.

Their first home together is a 130-square-foot room in a containerized housing unit, or CHU, at Camp Prosperity in Baghdad's Green Zone.

The Perezes pushed the standard-issue twin beds together and hung a Texas flag in the doorway for some extra privacy. Miguel bought Amanda a full-length mirror so she wouldn't have to do her makeup sitting on the floor. He plans to use the wood shop at Camp Prosperity to build a table for their new flat-screen TV.

As soon as they started dating, Amanda and Miguel had to ask the military's blessing. They went through counseling with the brigade's chaplain.

"We can't show affection in front of everybody because we're in uniform, so we really have to watch what we say to each other, and we can't touch each other," Miguel said.

MUSIC

"Blend. Play softly. That's where I want everybody soft so you can hear the trombone," Greene implored as they struggled with a challenging selection from the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical "The King and I."

A few minutes later one could hear the crash of a music stand as it vibrated off an elevated rehearsal stage and came smashing down on the brass section.

Superior Court Judge Brett Klein, the orchestra's first trumpet player, refrained from holding anybody in contempt. The judge, who earlier this year oversaw a dispute pitting the estate of music superstar Michael Jackson against an auction house, was too busy concentrating on nailing his part in "Trumpet Fanfare."

By showtime, he and other members of "L.A.'s only legal philharmonic orchestra" were ready for their appearance in the large lobby of the bar association building, opening with a melodic "Trumpet Voluntary" before moving on to uptempo favorites like Souza's "Washington Post."

"I played in the UCLA Symphony Orchestra as a student," said principal bass player Jack Lipton before the show. "It's just wonderful to be playing in an orchestra again."

The orchestra hit its stride this month at a Christmas-week holiday concert in which it performed a mixture of classical and pops pieces. At the end of the two-hour performance emceed by actress June Lockhart, a longtime friend of Greene's, the audience of more than 300 rose to give a standing ovation.

"The thing that's so amazing to me is to see all these judges and all these lawyers who are such brilliant musicians," said Lockhart. "As children they must have said, 'Mommy, I want to play the violin.' And Mommy must have said, 'No, you're going to go to law school and then you can play the violin."'

The group joins a handful of attorney-driven orchestras around the country, including the Chicago Bar Association Symphony where Judge Diane Wood, who was on a short list of candidates for the U.S. Supreme Court earlier this year, heads the oboe section. Atlanta and Boston also have orchestras.

But unlike those ensembles, which either augment their ranks with non-lawyers or are led by a professional musician, the L.A. group recruits only attorneys and is under the baton of Greene, who in his spare time is also concertmaster for the Los Angeles Junior Philharmonic.

The lawyer says he never doubted he could recruit an all-attorney orchestra for Los Angeles when he put out the call at the beginning of the year. What did surprise him, he said, was the quality of the players he quickly attracted.

"We have two Julliard grads and a number of people who studied at the nation's top conservatories," Greene said. "We have people who received master's degrees in their instruments."

First violinist Natalia Minassian, for example, simultaneously studied music at Julliard and political science at Columbia University before going on to earn a law degree. When the opportunity to play in an orchestra came along the commercial litigator jumped at the chance.

"It's the only environment where lawyers are making harmony as opposed to dissonance," she joked.

AS we welcome the new year, Columbus continues to have a flurry of activities in and around the community.

Another wonderful evening with Columbus Philharmonic Orchestra will feature Sylvia McNair, the world-renowned Grammy award-winning vocalist on Feb. 6. Sylvia was heard by the late Dick Johnson, who wanted to share her outstanding voice with his friends here in Columbus. This is part of the Distinguished Guest Artist Series, and tickets are going quickly.

Call the Columbus Philharmonic office for tickets. Save the date for the Columbus Indiana Philharmonic 2010 Gala on March 6. More on this next time.

Here is another chance to experience the excitement of the Metropolitan Opera in Bloomington at Showplace East 11 at 1 p.m. Jan. 9 featuring "Der Rosenkavalier." This is a live, high-definition performance transmission from the Met and includes interviews with cast members and behind-the-scenes features.

"Dancing with the Stars" tickets might still be available for the rehearsal at 2 p.m. on Jan. 23 if you were unable to purchase tickets for the evening performance. Call 378-3046 for more info.

Save the date for the kidscommons affair "Mardi Gras Carnivale" from 7 to 10:30 p.m. Feb. 13. Call 378-3046 for tickets.

Just received the Spring Personal Enrichment Catalogue from Ivy Tech, in which there are classes for everyone. The book "Still Life" will be discussed Monday, March 1 through the 22nd. It is a compelling story of the journey of a woman who is a Harvard professor and how she suffers with early Alzheimer's disease.

Basic drawing for beginners promises anyone and everyone can draw successfully in this art class and can be a budding Rembrandt and not know it; this is followed by oil painting for beginners and watercolor for beginners.

Bard's club

Shakespeare Club was conducted at the Fritsch home in December, hosted by Natalie Roll, Jody Harter and Shirley Richards. Our usual dessert of peppermint ice cream on a brownie was served with Natalie's famous chocolate sauce.

The Christmas music program was performed beautifully by Cindy McMillin on flute and Mirabella Minut on piano. Mirabella and her husband, Bogdan, will perform a piano duo at 7 p.m. Jan. 16 at St. Bartholomew Church with music by Gershwin, Bernstein, Copland, Joplin and Barber.

Garden Club

Whip-poor-will Garden Club conducted their Christmas Walk/Drive Around on Dec. 10. The decorated homes and lights at the lake were enjoyed by all, followed by an open house at the McDonald home with wassail and appetizers.

Christmas wreaths were handmade with a group gathering at Peggy Ross' garage. Committee members were Julia Marshall, Nea Ritz, Marg Essex, Debbie Divan and Sandi Hinshaw. The February meeting will be at the home of Jan Hexamer-Gardner.

Soaps

This column represents on-air summaries for the week of Dec. 28-Jan. 1.

ALL MY CHILDREN: Believing Greenlee is strong enough to survive off the drugs, David ordered her brought out of the coma. When Greenlee awoke, she asked for Ryan, and was shocked to learn she's been asleep for more than a year and that Ryan thinks she's dead. Ryan became embroiled in a custody battle for Emma in court and fumed when he was forced to bring Emma to see Adam and Annie renew their marriage vows.

Coming: The court case gets ugly.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Tipped off by Mick using a woman's voice, the police arrived at Wildwind. Meg fled with Eliza and was found by Alison in a stairwell at the hospital. Paul urged Meg to stay cool when the doctor from Deerbrook was summoned.

On Craig and Carly's trail, Jack followed them to a rustic cabin. As they tended to Craig, who had fallen through the top of a frozen pond, Jack and Carly grew closer. Meanwhile, already having challenged Jack about his and Janet's kiss, Dusty made love to Janet as the New Year arrived.

Coming: Lily becomes aware of Holden's new involvement.

BOLD AND BEAUTIFUL: Nick's suggestion that Sandy go to a rape treatment center wasn't well received, but she was moved when he called Lt. Baker about her case. After Sandy became fed up with getting the run-around and demanded answers from Lt. Baker, he agreed to get resolution for her.

Coming: Have the Foresters finally found a way to outmaneuver Bill?

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: After blurting out his love for Hope, Justin encouraged her to fight for her marriage if she still wants Bo. Meanwhile, Bo learned that someone was snooping at the Swiss hospital where Carly had her daughter, and, caught up in the emotion, Bo and Carly kissed, which Hope walked in on.

Despite her distress, Hope decided to protect Carly from Vivian, who schemed to take Carly's child away from her forever. Vivian and Victor walked in as Hope and Justin were sleuthing at the Kiriakis mansion, only to catch them in a passionate kiss.

Coming: Adrianna is in danger.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Faced with Johnny's photograph of Claudia's empty grave, Jason told Johnny the truth about the night Claudia was killed, but Johnny wouldn't tell Olivia the details because of her ties to Dominic. Sonny played on Olivia's reaction when she became jealous over seeing him flirt with Lisa.

Coming: Franco enjoys pulling the strings.

MELROSE PLACE: In a rebroadcast of the season's third episode, Jonah became furious with Riley when he found out that she didn't tell her friends and family about their engagement.

As Jonah focused his attention on work, having been recruited by Ella at the last minute to shoot a music video, Riley turned to Auggie for comfort.

Coming: Can Ella actually succeed in a normal relationship?

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Unaware of Schuyler's secret about Stacy's baby, Gigi invited him to spend New Year's Eve with her, and they gave in to their passion.

Coming: Tea and Todd struggle to stay apart.

YOUNG AND RESTLESS: After Sharon and Adam were wed, Nick found out and was ready to tear Adam apart, only to be stopped by Sharon. Later, Adam was relieved when Sharon didn't remember his note about the baby.

Emily accepted Jack's marriage proposal, news that Jack shared with Billy, as the brothers hoped for a better relationship in the New Year.

Coming: Malcolm's return produces strong emotions in the family.

Basement love letters bring complications

DEAR AMY: Seven years ago, when my then-boyfriend was dating me, he "confessed" that he had intimate relationships with three women before dating me.

Basically he portrayed himself as a next-to-virgin. And I took him at his word.

We have been married for two years.

Recently, when I cleaned the basement, I came across many love letters written by his ex-girlfriends. Based on these letters, my husband slept with way more than three women.

I wish I had never found these letters. It makes me think twice now when my husband tells me things.

I understand what happened was before my time, but I don't understand why he was not telling me the truth in the beginning of our relationship.

I hope this won't turn into a trust issue, and I hope he is faithful and honest in this marriage.

— Hurt

DEAR HURT: Your letter has provided excuse No. 362 as to why I never clean the basement.

The reason your husband lied about sex is because most people lie about sex.

I imagine that his motive at the time was to portray himself as the kind of potential partner he felt you wanted to have.

I'm not sure how many partners would qualify a person for "next-to-virgin" status, but let's stipulate that three partners does not a next-to-virgin make.

Ask Amy

Take this issue to your husband and ask him to talk to you about it.

Make sure you do this when you are calm and can have a thoughtful and meaningful conversation.

Give him an opportunity to tell you if there is anything else hiding in his figurative basement you should know about.

You should also make sure to answer truthfully any questions your husband might have for you.

When you're done, take these letters and pitch them.

DEAR AMY: I think you were off in your answer to "Jay," the artist who didn't want to create a work for free for a friend.

He mentioned the cost of his friend's apartment, $3 million.

Perhaps if he saw this as an opportunity to get back to why he started painting in the first place — a creative outlet,

Anyone who has an apartment that expensive will most likely be entertaining and the artist's work might be admired — and he might get more clients.

I think he was taken aback by the request, but "long-time friends" should be quite comfortable with each other — and should also go above and beyond for each other.

— Kerry

DEAR KERRY: Jay described himself as a professional artist.

Professional creative people don't generally need "creative outlets."

They need a paycheck.

Self-employed people (creative or otherwise) set the value for their work.

Their clients and friends will respect this value if they consider the work worth the money.

This situation gave Jay an opportunity to create a work (perhaps at some sort of self-declared "friends and family discount") and use its visibility to market his work to potential clients in a new city.

DEAR AMY: You ran a letter from "Frustrated Father," who felt self-conscious because as an older dad of a young child, he was sometimes referred to as "Grandpa."

My husband is also an older dad (48 when our son was born) and when our son was 4, one of his little friends said, "Why does your daddy look like a grandpa?"

Well, my husband made an appointment to color his hair that day.

— Lynn

DEAR LYNN: This isn't much of a solution for a man whose grandpa good looks derive from the lack (rather than the color) of his hair, but I'm happy it worked for your husband's self-esteem.

TV Highlights

TV: A look at the top 10 series of the decade

Maybe this decade has been the new golden age of television after all.

Certainly it has produced highly intelligent, engaging and compellingly written dramas, shot with a big-screen cinematic style.

In fact, the decade has witnessed some of the best programming in the entire history of the medium. HBO's "The Sopranos" rarely had a flawed moment, rivaling most any product playing in movie houses.

Also, the networks found summer to be a fertile ground to launch hits. "Survivor," "Dancing with the Stars" and "American Idol" all started out in the summer and were instantly embraced in record numbers.

Choosing the best programming of the decade is no small feat. Here, though, are the ones that put their artistic stamps on the past 10 years:

1. "The Sopranos" (HBO). Writer-director-creator David Chase fashioned a New Jersey mob story into a work of art, defying the conventions of continuing dramas and slowing down the pace.

2. "Six Feet Under" (HBO). Writer-director Alan Ball followed up his winning "American Beauty" film with this study of a dysfunctional family running a funeral home and pondering the weighty issues of life and death.

3. "Friday Night Lights" (NBC). No other series has ever captured the uniqueness of small-town life quite like this, from the political side of a high-school football team to the coming of age of the players who are revered as rock stars.

4. "Dexter" (Showtime). Based on a series of books, "Dexter" is blessed on two levels — Michael C. Hall's uncompromising portrayal of a serial killer trying to find his conscience, and plotting that cleverly ropes nail-biting stories together in unexpected manners.

5. "Lost" (ABC). Perhaps the most intelligent, frustrating and intricate drama of all time, "Lost" is an adventure so good that audiences didn't even know the point of it until season four.

6. "The Office" (United Kingdom). Ricky Gervais starred, co-created and co-wrote this fascinating character study of an office manager whose quirkiness made for uncomfortable and hilarious situations.

7. "Flight of the Conchords" (HBO). The idea sounds like a train wreck: a comedy about two New Zealand folksingers trying to make it in New York City.

8. "30 Rock" (NBC). Tina Fey skillfully applied her "Saturday Night Live" sarcasm to this half-hour workplace comedy.

9. "Life On Mars" (United Kingdom). Forget the ABC version. This original suspense drama about a British detective who suddenly wakes up 30 years in the past had it all — procedural intensity, a moving lone wolf of a lead character who longed to go home but found that his destiny was actually in the past.

10. "Mad Men" (AMC). No other series has quite the flare and captures an era like this 1960s-based drama about the employees of a successful advertising agency caught up in the explosion of a changing pop culture.

Horoscopes

Sunday, Jan. 3, 2010

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Even if your financial position looks promising, remain prudent at all times. The slightest extravagance on your part could instantly throw your budget out of whack.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Trust your judgment because your way of doing things is likely to be far more effective than the suggestion of a cohort. Don't surrender just to be a nice person.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Be sure to share equally with others all gains garnered from a collective effort, but don't think you have to reward someone because this person is nearby.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Don't get caught up in petty arguments, especially with friends. When all is said and done, nothing will be gained, but you could cause hard feelings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — If you decide to hit the stores for the after-holiday sales to acquire a special item, you might have to settle for something far less — or nothing at all.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Major complications will arise down the line if you deliberately ignore a problem that pops up. Unless you face the situation right now, it will only get worse with time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — You could find yourself in the company of someone who will prey upon your generous nature. Unless you've learned to say no, you're destined to lose out once again.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — It's admirable to be your own person and not need help from anyone, but there are times when it is just as laudable to be part of a team. Work with others, not against them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — A standoffish attitude could mean you're not taking proper advantage of something presented to you. It's not only your loss; it might be offensive to the gift bearer.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — If you need a favor, don't turn to someone who never does anything for anyone just because that person is nearby.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Lady Luck isn't likely to be anywhere around so don't take a chance on anything for which you need her help.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Stay away from stores that grossly exaggerate the quality of their wares, no matter how enticing their advertisements might be. Once again, their pitch will be superior to their product.

Medal winners

Here are some great new children's books by previous winners of the Newbery and Caldecott Medals:

● Two-time Newbery Medalist Lois Lowry has just published her first picture book, "Crow Call" (Scholastic, $16.99). Based on a memory from Lowry's childhood, "Crow Call" tells the story of a special day that a young girl named Liz spends with her father, just back from World War II.

● Sid Fleischman was visiting Mexico City one day when he spotted a hand-carved figure "of some wildly imaginative and dappled creature." Told it was a "dream stealer," Fleischman immediately began creating a story around the sculpture. The result is "The Dream Stealer" (HarperCollins, $16.99), in which Fleischman chronicles the efforts of a girl named Susana to seize her happy dream back from the Dream Stealer.

Fleischman's short, action-packed fantasy is complemented by Peter Sis' whimsical line drawings, which open each chapter. It's a winning package by two children's-literature veterans who have previously worked together on such books as "The Whipping Boy."

Fiction

'Empire' explores moral ambiguity

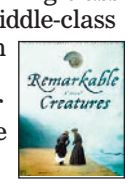
"Hidden Empire" (Tom Doherty Associates Book, 335 pages, $24.99), by Orson Scott Card: A favorite among sci-fi readers and video gamers, the prolific Orson Scott Card has taken on a topic closer to real life than usual — and with more of a Christian tone.

Set only a few years in the future, "Hidden Empire" is an engaging, if not finely written, parable about heroism and history and Christian faith.

Card explores how a domestic monopoly on power could be used to shape the transition to a "post-oil world."

Fossil hunter subject of new novel

"Remarkable Creatures" by Tracy Chevalier: Working-class Anning meets the middle-class unmarried Elizabeth Philpot and through their mutual love for fossils, the two strike up a strange camaraderie.



Anning, the subject of the tongue-twister "She Sells Sea Shells on the Sea Shore," is on the hunt for what she believes to be a giant crocodile similar to one (later named an ichthyosaurus) she found in 1811 when she was 12, which later rocked the scientific world.

Eating right with new cookbooks

● "Moosewood Restaurant Cooking For Health," the latest installment from the Moosewood Collective, offers more than 200 creative, easy-to-prepare vegetarian and vegan recipes. Greek-tomato yogurt soup delivers a tasty, tangy take on ordinary tomato soup and packs a big calcium and lycopene punch in just 30 minutes. Four stovetop tofus — including pomegranate-glazed and tropical lime — make creative use of the potentially boring staple. Love the info on calories, carbs, protein and other nutrients with each recipe.

● In "The Kind Diet," actress Alicia Silverstone promises to help you feel great, lose weight and save the planet. Silverstone pairs arguments for veganism with pictures of cute chicks (the poultry sort) and piggies, and wraps up with recipes for dishes such as radicchio pizza with truffle oil, pecan-crusted seitan and egg salad sandwiches made of tofu.

● "Clean Food" by Terry Walters is designed to help you adjust your lifestyle, changing not just what you eat, but how and when you eat. More than 200 recipes organized according to season make use of many ingredients.

Top 10 photos

Flood, fire and lightning, with a little demolition work, rock-throwing, a touching moment or two, and some colorful scenes thrown in.

This page displays our staff's favorite photographs from the past 10 years of The Republic.

After the photographers winnowed the field to 10 candidates, we polled the newsroom to come up with the ranking.

It is hard to imagine everyone would agree with our choices.

So, we wouldn't mind hearing from folks with ideas of images that we didn't include on this page.

To see other photos we like but didn't quite have room for here, check out our Best Photos of the Decade at therepublic.com.

Send suggestions and comments to jharpring@therepublic.com and we'll do our best to post as many as we can in the days to come.

Pushing the limits

East senior fights battles on, off court successfully

By Brian Bennett
bbennett@therepublic.com

On the floor, Columbus East senior Erika Lomax battles for every rebound and loose ball, her passion evident when she fails to corral one.

Yet the biggest opponent for Lomax on the court is one that she faces quietly: anemia.

The deficiency, which leads to a decrease in red blood cells, limits how much and how long the senior forward can play on a game-to-game basis.

"It limits you," said Lomax, who had just finished a practice that saw her spend more time than normal for a starter during a scrimmage watching from the sideline. "You just feel weak and drained after just little increments of time.

"It's hard to just push through, but I've been doing it forever now."

The anemia became noticeable during her freshman season, right about the same time that Lomax was making a name for herself as one of three freshmen finding some varsity time on the O's eventual state runner-up team.

Lomax scored two points and grabbed two rebounds in East's loss to South Bend Washington at Conseco Fieldhouse.

This year, as a senior captain, Lomax was averaging 8.1 points per game and more than four rebounds per contest before the start of this past week's tournament at Southwestern (Hanover).

"She's a great kid and a great leader for us," East coach Danny Brown said. "She's been a big part of what we've done over the past few years.

"We've depended on Erika Lomax a lot the past four years, that's for sure."

Andrew Laker | The Republic

Columbus East's Erika Lomax dives for the ball as Columbus North's Megan Schultz defends during the North-East game Dec. 29.

A competitor

Lomax also suffers from asthma, and that combines with the anemia to limit how much the senior can play.

It does not, however, limit how hard she plays, according to Brown.

"She's such a competitor in practice and games," he said. "She gives it 100 percent, and she wants to be in on every play. So we've got to watch her condition.

"We think we've doing a good job of it over the years."

Lomax has to watch what she does, too.

"I'm taking two different iron supplements, and I really am watching what I eat," she said, noting she tries to add foods that are already high in iron. "I can't have a lot of chocolate syrup or anything like that, because it triggers it."

Then, there are those times she has to watch just how excited she gets. Brown said one of the crucial times to keep an eye on her is at the beginning of big games.

"She's getting pumped up, and that adrenaline gets flowing," he said. "Those are the times that we have to back off of her."

Learning to lead

But there's not much backing off now from Lomax, who wants her senior season to be as successful as those that have come before it.

Pacers snap losing streak at T'wolves' expense

By Cliff Brunt

INDIANAPOLIS — Roy Hibbert and Luther Head each scored 21 points and the Indiana Pacers beat the Minnesota Timberwolves 122-111 on Saturday night to snap an eight-game losing streak.

Brandon Rush scored 16 points and Mike Dunleavy added 15 points and eight rebounds for the Pacers.

Pacers 122
T'wolves 111

Al Jefferson scored 23 points, Wayne Ellington had a career-high 16 and Kevin Love also scored 16 for the Timberwolves, who have lost four straight.

Indiana played without Troy Murphy, who is day-to-day with a sprained left ankle. Pacers coach Jim O'Brien shuffled his lineup after Wednesday's loss to Memphis, giving Josh McRoberts his first career start and inserting Earl Watson at point guard in place of T.J. Ford, who did not play.

Indiana led by 29 points in the first half and by 13 at the end of the third quarter before barely holding on.

The Timberwolves cut Indiana's lead to 115-111 on Love's three-point play with 53 seconds to remaining. On Indiana's next possession, Hibbert found a cutting Watson, who converted an acrobatic reverse layup and was fouled on the play. Watson made the free throw to extend Indiana's lead to 118-111 with 33 seconds to play.

O'Brien said before the game that Ford wouldn't play, and that Watson and rookie

Nothing's perfect as Bills prepare to host Colts

By John Wawrow
Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Pardon Bills linebacker Paul Posluszny for sounding a little envious in light of the critics who spent much of the week knocking the Indianapolis Colts for resting their starters and squandering a bid at a perfect season.

The Bills should have such problems.

"Absolutely, who wouldn't want that dilemma, win that many games, home field secured for the playoffs?" Posluszny said, shaking his head and breaking into a laugh. "Yeah, who wouldn't want that? I'd love to be in their shoes."

Not this season in Buffalo. Not this past decade, for that matter.

Two former AFC East rivals who have spent the 2000s going in totally opposite directions close the regular season today in a game with very little at stake.

The Bills (5-10) have already assured themselves of missing the playoffs for a 10th straight year. And they prepare for an uncertain offseason after team owner Ralph Wilson fired coach Dick Jauron in November and has vowed to revamp his entire front office.

The first move came on Thursday, when national scout Buddy Nix was promoted to take over as general manager.

The Colts (14-1) have nothing significant to play for either, but for an altogether different reason.

They clinched their eighth straight playoff berth in late November, and will enter the postseason as the AFC's top-seeded team, capping a decade in which they registered a league-record 115 wins.

And whatever intrigue that might have been left for Indianapolis was stripped away last week in a 29-15 loss to the New York Jets. Peyton Manning and numerous starters spent much of the second half on the sideline watching the team's opportunity to go 16-0 end with a thud.

The loss also ended Indianapolis' record regular-season win streak at 23.

Encarnacion burned by fireworks

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic — Toronto Blue Jays infielder Edwin Encarnacion is recuperating after he was burned in the face by fireworks while celebrating the new year in his native Dominican Republic.

Fiancee Jennifer Pena said that Encarnacion was released from the hospital Saturday and is resting at home. She says his injuries do not require surgery.

She says he received first- and second-degree burns when his brother released a firework that hit him in the right side of the face and exploded near his body.

Encarnacion was celebrating with his family in the southeastern coastal city of La Romana.

White leads Nitro to win over Blur

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Darius White scored two touchdowns and Team Nitro defeated Team Blur 32-7 in the Under Armour All-America game Saturday.

White scored on a 35-yard punt return early in the third quarter to give Nitro a 19-7 lead and added an 11-yard reception from Devin Gardner early in the fourth quarter

Dominique Easley and Michael Taylor were named the game's co-MVPs.

St. Louis Blues fire coach Murray

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Blues have fired coach Andy Murray and appointed Davis Payne interim head coach.

The Blues have been struggling this season and are 12th in the Western Conference with a 17-17-6 record.

Murray was hired by the Blues in 2006 after coaching the Los Angeles Kings and working as assistant in Philadelphia, Minnesota and Winnipeg.

Team president John Davidson cited Payne's nine winning seasons in the minors, including an ECHL championship in 2006.

Snowboarder critical but stable

SALT LAKE CITY — American snowboarder Kevin Pearce's publicist says he is in critical but stable condition at a Salt Lake City hospital after a training accident.

Danielle Burch said Saturday that Pearce is surrounded by family and friends at University of Utah hospital.

Pearce was knocked unconscious when he hit his head during a training run Thursday in Park City.

The 22-year-old from Norwich, Vt., is a top-ranked halfpipe rider who was preparing for next week's Olympic qualifying events in Mammoth Mountain, Calif. He is considered, along with Shaun White, to be one of America's top athletes in a sport dominated by the United States.

Michigan, George Mason top classic

KEY LARGO, Fla. — Michigan and George Mason took top overall men and women's honors on Saturday at the Orange Bowl Swimming Classic in the Florida Keys.

Michigan easily won against second-place finisher Duke and George Mason's men's team that finished third.

George Mason's women swimmers beat Duke and Vermont, however coach Peter Ward said the experience of racing in a different environment provides the real value for his team.

Staged at the Jacobs Aquatic Center, the Classic is the highlight event of the winter collegiate training season in the Keys.

Several Olympic athletes swam in the exhibition, including Peter Vanderkaay, a 2008 Olympic gold winner in the 4 X 200-meter freestyle relay.

TAMPA, Fla. — Zenon Konopka celebrated his 29th birthday with a rare goal and the Tampa Bay Lightning beat the Pittsburgh Penguins 3-1 on Saturday.

Tampa Bay went up 2-1 on Konopka's second of the season, a rebound effort at 14:26 of the second. He has six goals in 79 career games.

Martin St. Louis and Steve Downie also scored for the Lightning, who have won five of seven.

Bill Guerin scored for the defending Stanley Cup champion Penguins, who have lost four in a row. Sidney Crosby, who has one goal in his last seven games, and Evgeni Malkin, without a goal over his past four games, were shut out again.

Downie made it 3-1 from the right circle at 7:11 of the third.

Avalanche 3, Blue Jackets 2

COLUMBUS, Ohio — T.J. Galiardi crashed the net and scored on a rebound with just under a minute left to give Colorado a victory over Columbus.

Colorado's Milan Hejduk carried the puck into the offensive zone and fired the puck at goalie Steve Mason. Mason stopped the puck but it bounced to the left circle where Galiardi, who was trailing the play, collected it and beat Mason with 57.8 seconds left.

Kyle Cumiskey and Chris Stewart also scored for the Avalanche, who have won nine of 13 overall and five of their last six road games.

Kristian Huselius and Derick Brassard had goals for Columbus, which hasn't scored more than two goals in its last 10 games and has lost 20 of its last 23 (3-13-7) since a 12-6-2 start.

Canucks 3, Stars 1

DALLAS — Daniel Sedin scored the go-ahead power-play goal early in the third period and Roberto Luongo made 31 saves as Vancouver beat Dallas.

Sedin took a pass from his brother Henrik in a 1-1 game and flicked a shot toward the crease while Dallas' Mike Modano was serving a high-sticking penalty.

The puck glanced off the skate of Dallas defenseman Trevor Daley and past goalie Marty Turco at 2:38 of the final period for Sedin's 11th goal of the season.

Ryan Kesler added a second-period goal and Alex Burrows had an empty-netter with 16 seconds remaining for the Canucks, who wrapped up a 4-0-1 trip.

Flames 3, Maple Leafs 1

CALGARY, Alberta — Curtis Glencross scored the go-ahead goal on a power play midway through the second period and added an empty-netter in Calgary's victory over Toronto.

Jarome Iginla also scored, and Miikka Kiprusoff made 24 saves to help the Flames extend their winning streak to four games. Jason Blake scored for Toronto. The Maple Leafs have lost five of their last six games.

Hurricanes 2, Rangers 1, OT

NEW YORK — Ray Whitney scored 3:45 into overtime as Carolina earned a split of the home-and-home series against New York.

Whitney controlled the puck amid pressure along the left wing boards, moved it to Matt Cullen behind the New York net and then took a return feed in front for his 11th goal. Carolina, which has an NHL-worst 29 points, won on the road for just the third time this season (3-13-4).

Cam Ward made 27 saves, and Tom Kostopoulos staked the Hurricanes to a 1-0 lead in the second period.

Henrik Lundqvist, who appeared to be shaken up after making a save late in regulation, kept the Rangers in it by stopping 17 shots. Lundqvist allowed two goals or fewer for the 11th time in 14 games.

Islanders 6, Thrashers 5, SO

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Jeff Tambellini and Frans Nielsen scored shootout goals to give New York a victory over Atlanta.

Atlanta, which erased two three-goal deficits, lost for the eighth straight time, but picked up points for a second straight night following an overtime loss to Buffalo.

Slava Kozlov scored in the shootout for Atlanta, but Ilya Kovalchuk and Rich Peverley shot wide against Dwayne Roloson to hand New York its third win in five games.

Tambellini scored with a head-on wrist shot against Johan Hedberg, and Nielsen connected on a backhander.

Kings 2, Capitals 1

LOS ANGELES — Michal Handzus scored a short-handed goal early in the third period to put Los Angeles ahead, and Ryan Smyth connected on a power play to lead the Kings over Washington.

Jonathan Quick stopped 26 shots one day after he was selected for the U.S. Olympic team along with Los Angeles teammates Dustin Brown and Jack Johnson.

Quick kept the Kings in the game during a one-sided second period in which the Capitals outshot Los Angeles 13-2. He made two tough saves on Alex Ovechkin in less than a minute, flicking out his right leg at the last instant to thwart Ovechkin's tricky 25-foot wrist shot with 9½ minutes left in the period, then stopping another wrist shot from point-blank range by the two-time MVP.

Red Wings 4, Coyotes 1

GLENDALE, Ariz. — Tomas Holmstrom deflected two of Nicklas Lidstrom's shots into the net for his 14th and 15th goals to help Detroit beat Phoenix.

Pavel Datsyuk added a power-play goal, and Darren Helm had an empty-netter for the Red Wings, who opened a five-game trip with their second straight win.

The Coyotes had a two-man advantage when Matthew Lombardi scored their lone goal.

Phoenix lost at home in regulation for the first time since Nov. 16, a span of 12 games, in front of a crowd announced as a sellout of 17,125.

Colts WR arrested

ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Authorities say a Colts practice squad wide receiver Taj Smith has been arrested in Indianapolis on suspicion of drunken driving.

TAJ SMITH

A police report says the 26-year-old was stopped about 3:30 a.m. Friday after an officer noticed the vehicle he was driving crossed lane divider lines and went above the 30 mph speed limit.

The report says Smith smelled of alcohol and failed field sobriety and alcohol breath tests. The Marion County sheriff's department says Smith was released later Friday. Police didn't know whether he had a lawyer.

Smith signed to the Colts practice squad in September. The team said Saturday it was aware of the matter but had no further comment.

Liberty: Arkansas rings E. Carolina's bell

OT field goal kick tells success tale in Razorbacks' defeat of Pirates

BY NOAH TRISTER
Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Alex Tejada kicked the ball through the uprights, turned around and ran toward the opposite end of the field. His Arkansas teammates chased him all the way to the end zone amid a wild scene of celebration and relief.

East Carolina vs. Arkansa

Tejada's 37-yard field goal in overtime gave Arkansas a 20-17 win in the Liberty Bowl on Saturday night after East Carolina's Ben Hartman missed two field goal attempts late in regulation and another in the extra session. Tejada, who missed an overtime kick in a loss to LSU to end the regular season, redeemed himself by helping the Razorbacks overcome the upset-minded Pirates.

"I was pretty confident," Tejada said. "I felt like the wind was blowing really favorably that way, so going into overtime I felt good about our chances to win the game. Once I stepped up, I had all the confidence that it was going to go through."

Tejada missed a crucial kick in a loss to Florida in October, and his miss against LSU prevented the Razorbacks from forcing a second overtime.

"He took a lot of heat all year, and he stepped up and made a play in a big game," Arkansas quarterback Ryan Mallett said. "The team stuck behind him during the whole season when all you guys were yapping at him. We're a team, and we stuck behind him."

Tejada missed from 43 yards in the fourth quarter Saturday, but his struggles were nothing compared with Hartman's. The East Carolina senior missed four attempts in all, each at the same end of the field. He was short from 45 yards in the first quarter, then hit the left upright from 39 yards with 1:03 remaining in regulation with the score tied.

He missed from 39 yards again on the final play of the fourth quarter, then missed from 35 in overtime.

Arkansas (8-5) had won only two of its previous 14 bowls, and the Razorbacks insisted they were unusually focused on this one. It didn't show. Arkansas' vaunted offense had the ball for only 22:05. Mallett was named most valuable player, but he went only 15 of 36 for 202 yards and a touchdown.

"We never did find a good rhythm and we didn't execute as well as we're used to, but we stayed in there and kept working," Arkansas coach Bobby Petrino said. "We beat them. That's what it is all about. I'm not sure who outplayed who, but we won the game."

The Liberty Bowl is right across the Mississippi River from Arkansas, but the Razorbacks were playing in the game for the first time since 1987. Except for a small section of purple in one corner, the crowd was a sea of Arkansas red.

Those fans watched their team go 0 of 13 on third down. The low point came toward the end of regulation: After Hartman's miss with just over a minute remaining, the Razorbacks went three-and-out in only 29 seconds, allowing the Pirates (9-5) to set up Hartman again.

This potential game-winner went wide right.

Hartman's field goal and two extra points in the game were enough to break the school's career scoring record, but that was small consolation.

"If you said you were going to have your all-time leading scorer with an opportunity to win it, who has won a bunch of game-winners for you during his career here, he was the one soul I would have picked," East Carolina coach Skip Holtz said. "It's unfortunate."

Cotton: McCluster-led Ole Miss beats OSU

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ARLINGTON, Texas — Dexter McCluster gave Mississippi fans a finale to remember, rushing for 182 yards and two touchdowns, including the go-ahead 2-yard run on a direct snap with 4:03 left as the Rebels beat No. 21 Oklahoma State 21-7 in the Cotton Bowl on Saturday.

Oklahoma St. vs. Mississippi

McCluster also had an 86-yard TD run in the second quarter after the senior had already become the first Southeastern Conference player with 1,000 yards rushing and 500 yards receiving in the same season.

Ole Miss (9-4) had five turnovers in the game, but Oklahoma State had six in the fourth quarter, and seven overall.

The Rebels failed to capitalize on Kendrick Lewis' two interceptions, but McCluster scored after a fumble to break a 7-7 tie. Patrick Trahan picked up another fumble and returned it 36 yards for a touchdown less than a minute later, then intercepted a deflected fourth-down pass by Oklahoma State's Zac Robinson on the next drive.

The Cowboys (9-4) missed a chance for their first 10-win season since 1988 when coach Mike Gundy was their starting quarterback. Ole Miss coach and former Oklahoma State quarterback Houston Nutt was one of their coaches then.

Nutt has led to Rebels to consecutive 9-4 seasons, both capped by Cotton Bowl victories. Ole Miss had lost all eight of its SEC games in 2007 before Nutt replaced the fired Ed Orgeron.

Ole Miss and Oklahoma State, also 9-4 a year ago, came into this season with unprecedented expectations. Both were in the AP preseason Top 10 before early losses. Each entered the Cotton Bowl coming off decisive losses against their instate conference rivals in their regular-season finales.

They finished with a mistake-filled game in which both teams had missed opportunities — each was stopped on fourth-and-goal from the 1, and Ole Miss missed two field goal attempts.

McCluster was the obvious standout, with his 32 carries and five catches for 45 yards. He leaves Ole Miss with 3,921 career all-purpose yards, second in school history behind Deuce McAllister's 4,889.

After becoming only Ole Miss' fourth 1,000-yard rusher on his third carry of the game, McCluster surpassed 500 yards receiving on the final play of the first quarter. Yet, his best was still to come.

McCluster's 86-yard TD run in the second quarter came on a handoff from freshman quarterback Nathan Stanley. McCluster went to the right and through a gap, running untouched for the second-longest run in the 74-year history of the Cotton Bowl.

That was Ole Miss' first offensive play after Jevan Snead threw an interception and was hit so hard on a blindside block while pursuing the defender with the ball that his helmet got knocked off.

Snead, a junior who has not declared if he will return for his senior season or go to the NFL early, finished 13 of 23 for 168 yards with three interceptions, pushing his season total to 20.

Robinson was 13 of 27 for 118 yards with two interceptions.

International: S. Florida romps vs. N. Illinois

ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Mike Ford ran for a career-high 207 yards and scored one touchdown, B.J. Daniels threw two scoring passes to A.J. Love, and South Florida beat Northern Illinois 27-3 in the International Bowl on Saturday.

S. Florida vs. Northern Illinois

Carlton Mitchell caught six passes for 94 yards for the Bulls, who won back-to-back bowls for the first time. South Florida beat Memphis 41-14 in last year's St. Petersburg Bowl, part of a streak of five straight bowl appearances.

South Florida scored 24 unanswered points in the second half after the teams traded field goals in a dreary first half.

Ford had just one carry in the first half, an 18-yard gain in the second quarter. He broke out in the third, rushing 12 times for 106 yards, then capped his day with a 24-yard scoring run in the final quarter.

It's the third straight year a Big East running back has topped 200 yards in the International Bowl. Ray Rice of Rutgers turned pro after rushing for a game-record 280 yards and four touchdowns in 2007, while Connecticut's Donald Brown ran for 261 yards in last year's game.

South Florida's Moise Pincher, center, tries to find a path through the Northern Illinois defense during the first half of the International Bowl, Saturday in Toronto.

Daniels threw for 217 yards. Making consecutive postseason appearances for the first time, the Huskies lost their third straight bowl and extended the Mid-American Conference's bowl game losing streak to 14 games.

Big East teams have now defeated their Mid-American Conference opponents in all four International Bowls, the only bowl game played outside the United States. Cincinnati beat Western Michigan in the inaugural game in 2007, followed by victories for Rutgers over Ball State in 2008 and Connecticut over Buffalo in 2009.

Northern Illinois running back Chad Spann carried 20 times for 93 yards, giving him 1,038 for the season.

The Bulls took the lead for good on the opening drive of the third quarter. Ford's 36-yard run set up Daniels' 31-yard pass to Mitchell, who shook off a tackle and raced down the sideline to the 6.

It was a record-setting catch for Mitchell, giving him 680 yards on the season and breaking Hugh Smith's school mark of 661 set in 2002. The Bulls couldn't punch it in, but went ahead on Eric Schwartz's 19-yard field goal.

Daniels hooked up with Love for the game's first touchdown on the Bulls' next possession, a 46-yard strike off his back foot, capping an eight-play, 81-yard drive.

Cornerback Jerome Murphy picked off Huskies quarterback Chandler Harnish on the next possession, giving South Florida the ball at its 48. Ford carried five times to get the Bulls to the 7, where, on the first play of the fourth quarter, Daniels connected with Love again, making it 20-3.

Papajohns.com: Dixon runs UConn past S. Carolina

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Andre Dixon rushed for 126 yards and a touchdown and resilient Connecticut ended a trying season with a 20-7 victory over South Carolina in the Papajohns.com Bowl on Saturday.

Connecticut vs. S. Carolina

The Huskies (8-5) are 3-1 in bowl games since moving up to Division I-A (now FBS) in 2002. They won their final three regular-season games and overcame the October stabbing death of cornerback Jasper Howard to reach a bowl.

UConn made the most of the trip. The nation's 95th-rated pass defense throttled South Carolina (7-6) and quarterback Stephen Garcia while relying on Dixon's 33 carries to control the ball.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

South Carolina receiver Jason Barnes (4) catches a pass over Connecticut defender Robert McClain (42) during Saturday's Papajohns.com Bowl in Birmingham, Ala.

Dixon was the Most Valuable Player and joined teammate Jordan Todman as 1,000-yard rushers, the first time two UConn backs have surpassed that mark in the same season.

Garcia completed just 16 of 38 passes for 129 yards while gaining 56 yards on 15 carries. He lost a fumble, was intercepted once and didn't get much help.

UConn had a pristine performance, with zero penalties and turnovers.

The Gamecocks avoided their first shutout in three seasons on Brian Maddox's 2-yard touchdown run with 3:24 left. Their only other possession ending in UConn territory resulted in a botched field goal attempt.

It was UConn's first meeting with a Southeastern Conference team, and the Huskies were in control throughout. They downed the ball inside South Carolina's 5-yard line at the end instead of adding to the score just as coach Randy Edsall was doused by his celebrating players.

It was another difficult postseason chapter for the Gamecocks, who are now 4-11 in bowl games and 1-3 under coach Steve Spurrier. They have been outscored 51-17 the past two years including a loss to Iowa in last season's Outback Bowl.

This one was marred by dropped passes, a missed interception and costly penalties that kept a mostly red-and-black clad crowd subdued — and steadily shrinking by the fourth quarter. Garcia also faced frequent pressure and was sacked three times and flushed out of the pocket plenty more.

Leading receiver Alshon Jeffery was held to three catches for 28 yards, all in the first half. Tailback Kenny Miles had just six carries for 24 yards.

Dixon's 10-yard touchdown with 13:12 left effectively put the game away. Jesse Simpson had set the Huskies up at the Gamecocks' 29-yard line by forcing Garcia to fumble, knocking it away from behind at the end of a run.

A South Carolina team that pounded Clemson with 58 runs in a win to finish the regular season finished with 26 rushes for 76 yards.

UConn never appeared daunted playing in SEC country, jumping ahead 13-0. Kashif Moore snagged the ball one-handed down the right sideline for a 37-yard touchdown catch from Zach Frazer in the first quarter. Dave Teggard then kicked field goals of 33 and 44 yards. The first kick was set up when Garcia was stopped on a sneak on fourth-and-1 from South Carolina's 32.

South Carolina didn't even manage its initial first down until midway through the second quarter, and that took Garcia converting a third-and-16.

That drive ended with three straight incompletions. A 52-yard field goal attempt was botched when holder Stephen Flint bobbled the ball and had to try to run for it. South Carolina wouldn't get more chances before the game was out of reach.

South Carolina's sloppy play continued into the second half. Running into the kicker and roughing the passer calls helped UConn keep its first drive alive for more than seven minutes, though it ended with a fumble.

Then, cornerback Akeem Auguste dropped an easy interception with nothing between him and the end zone. The Gamecocks quickly gave the ball back with Garcia's fumble.

Plenty still at stake as season wraps up

How boring is the NFC, with all six playoff participants already decided?

Well, the conference is pretty spicy, actually, with the East crown about to be decided in Dallas, the Vikings capable of being seeded second, third or fourth, and the top-ranked Saints suddenly struggling.

The AFC already has all four division winners and has concentrated its frenzy on the wild-card race, which has seven teams still in the scramble.

The Ravens and Jets are in control, but if either slips, the Broncos, Steelers, Jaguars, Texans and Dolphins remain possibilities. Denver has 10 scenarios by which it can get a wild card, half of those not even requiring the Broncos to win today against Kansas City.

Most intriguing are the Eagles (11-4) at the Cowboys (10-5) and the Bengals (10-5) at the Jets (8-7).

Week 17 Preview

Dallas won 20-16 at Philadelphia on Nov. 8, seemingly taking charge of the division. But the Cowboys went 4-3 after that, while Philly went 6-1 to take the NFC East lead. Today's winner gets the title and perhaps a bye in the first round of the postseason.

"I think it was set up real great. We're in a good situation to go in and show everybody what we're made of. Doing it (against the Eagles) is even better. We're in a great situation."

Of course, they were in the same situation a year ago in the wild-card race, went into Philadelphia and got routed 44-6.

An Eagles victory earns them that bye. Dallas needs a win and losses by Minnesota and Arizona to get the week off.

Most people, including Jets coach Rex Ryan, thought the Jets would have the postseason off after a loss to Atlanta two weeks ago.

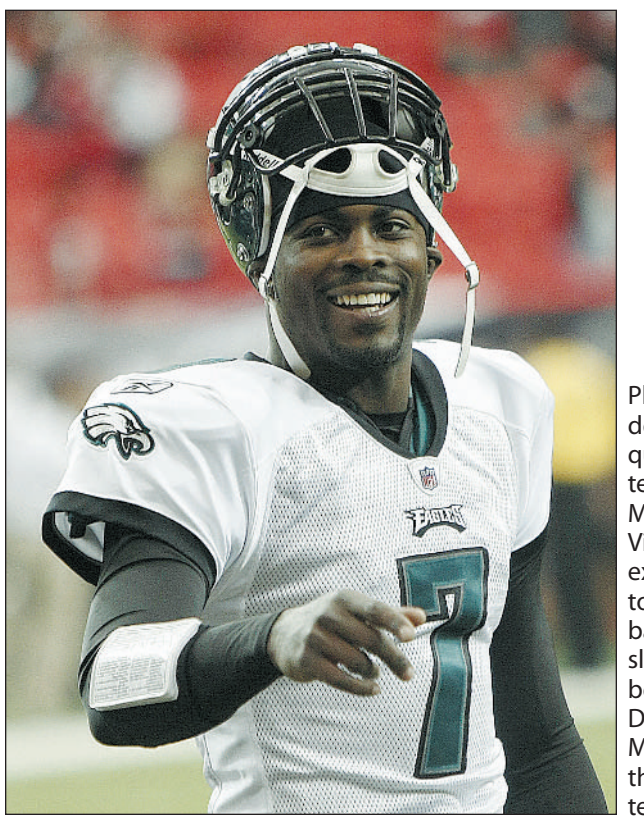
Then everything New York required to remain viable for the playoffs happened last weekend — including the Colts waving an unbeaten season goodbye by sitting nearly every starter in the third quarter of a close game. The Jets rallied to hand Indianapolis its first loss, and with a victory tonight over the AFC North champion Bengals, who also might rest their regulars, New York gets in.

"We had a lot of tough games this year, a lot of tough losses, games that we thought we would win and we ended up coming up short," running back Thomas Jones said.

"For us to have an opportunity to even get in the playoffs at this point in the season says a lot about our coaching staff, says a lot about Rex and the commitment that they have to us. It says a lot about the character of our team and guys not giving up."

It also says a lot about having a favorable schedule at the end of the season.

In other games today, it's Baltimore at Oakland, Pittsburgh at Miami, New England at Houston, Indianapolis at Buffalo, New Orleans at Carolina, Jacksonville at Cleveland, the New York Giants at Minnesota, Washington at San Diego, Green Bay at Arizona, Chicago at Detroit, San Francisco at St. Louis, Atlanta at Tampa Bay, and Tennessee at Seattle.



Philadelphia quarterback Michael Vick is expected to fill the backup slot behind Donovan McNabb this afternoon.

Saints seek confidence boost in matchup with Carolina

By Mike Cranston
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The unstoppable offense has been slowed a bit. The opportunistic defense has some holes. Perfection was dashed, followed by embarrassment a week later.

Instead of being in the middle of a New Orleans-sized celebration for capturing the franchise's first No. 1 playoff seed, the Saints (13-2) go into today's regular-season finale against the Carolina Panthers (7-8) looking to get their mojo back.

Yet as the game drew closer, coach Sean Payton started having second thoughts on how much, if any, to play his starters against the suddenly dangerous Panthers. Quarterback Drew Brees and safety Darren Sharper are among a list of veterans who aren't expected to play.

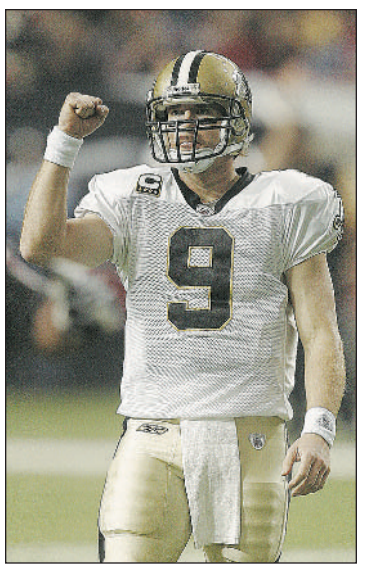
Fear of injury trumps wanting to finish strong.

"Everyone knows going into the playoffs you want to be peaking and playing your best football," Sharper said. "As of late, we are not doing that."

Brees will be the No. 3 QB behind starter Mark Brunell and rookie Chase Daniel, while the Saints' struggling defense won't be at full strength.

It seems like no coach wants his quarterback to face the Panthers these days.

Out of the postseason race for more than a month, Carolina has stunned playoff-bound Minnesota and ended the New York Giants' postseason hopes with consecutive routs by a combined 67-16, looking nothing like the team the started 0-3 and lost to the Saints in Week 9.



Associated Press

New Orleans quarterback Drew Brees will play benchwarmer today behind starter Mark Brunell and rookie Chase Daniel.

Vikings coach Brad Childress wanted to take out Brett Favre in the third quarter against Carolina after he was constantly getting hit. Now it appears Brees won't play against Julius Peppers and company.

Saints off stride?

The Saints have been a bit off for more than a month. They narrowly beat non-playoff teams Washington and Atlanta to improve to 13-0. Then came a home loss to Dallas to end hopes of a perfect season.

They seemed to have bounced back in building a 17-0 lead over the Buccaneers last week before a meltdown and a key missed field goal attempt gave them the distinction of being the first team with 13 wins to lose to a team with only two victories.

"How did it happen? That's not us," said Brees, who if he doesn't play will set the NFL single-season completion percentage record at 70.60. "That's not the team we are. But after looking at the film there are some things, some areas where we have to be better."

The defense is where the struggles have been pronounced. The Bucs rushed for 176 yards and New Orleans has dropped to 24th in the league in total defense. Now the Saints face a team that has been running over opponents.

Jonathan Stewart, filling in for injured Pro Bowl pick DeAngelo Williams, rushed for a franchise-record 206 yards in Carolina's drubbing of the Giants. Williams and Stewart are only the sixth pair of teammates since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger to each rush for more than 1,000 yards.

Throw in Matt Moore's nearly flawless performance the past two games (six touchdown passes, no interceptions) and the Panthers are suddenly potent on offense after struggling to score with Jake Delhomme at quarterback. But Carolina will be without star receiver Steve Smith, who broke his arm catching a touchdown pass against the Giants.

The game will end a tumultuous season for Carolina, hobbled by injuries and uncertainty. Coach John Fox is expected back next season, but hasn't been offered a contract extension beyond 2010 and could try to seek other jobs. Peppers could be in for another free agency tussle after leading the team with 10½ sacks and earning his fifth Pro Bowl berth.

NFL WEEK 17

NFC East title on the line as Eagles visit Cowboys

The winner of this game takes home the NFC East title and perhaps the No. 2 seed in the NFC playoffs.

Indianapolis (14-1) at Buffalo (5-10)
Whether Peyton Manning plays more than one series is pure speculation. Buffalo is 2-4 under interim coach Perry Fewell.

New Orleans (13-2) at Carolina (7-8)
Saints dropped two in a row and haven't played lights-out on O or D since November. John Fox should keep his coaching job with a .500 finish.

Jacksonville (7-8) at Cleveland (4-11)
Three straight losses dropped the Jaguars from control of the AFC wild-card dash to needing lots of help. Browns have won three straight.

Philadelphia (11-4) at Dallas (10-5)
The East crown about to be decided in Dallas. Winner gets the title and perhaps a bye in the first round of the postseason.

Chicago (6-9) at Detroit (2-13)
Lions can't look at this year as successful, but at least it's not 0-16. Bears looked like a contender in Monday night's OT win against Vikes.

New Egland (10-5) at Houston (8-7)
Does Bill Belichick care that much about being a No. 3 or No. 4 seed? With right results, Texans could sneak in to face Pats again next weekend.

Pittsburgh (8-7) at Miami (7-8)
How badly will defending Super Bowl champions feel if they beat the Dolphins and finish 9-7 and get left out of the postseason?

N.Y. Giants (8-7) at Minnesota (11-4)
Giants' D is a shell of the unit that helped win a Super Bowl less than two years ago. Vikings have gone into a dive, losing three of last four.

Cincinnati (10-5) at N.Y. Jets (8-7)
Jets make the playoffs with a win, and given how little this game means to Cincinnati, the Jets should have a decent shot at emerging victorious.

San Francisco (7-8) at St. Louis (1-14)
String of six straight losing records for the Niners could end if they handle the dreadful Rams, who can earn No. 1 overall draft pick.

Atlanta (8-7) at Tampa Bay (3-12)
Falcons can end string of 43 seasons without consecutive winning records by beating Bucs. They come off a stunning upset of the Saints.

Green Bay (10-5) at Arizona (10-5)
These teams could meet in the wild-card round next weekend. Packers are winners of six of their last seven games.

Kansas City (3-12) at Denver (8-7)
Broncos have stumbled so badly that Chargers surged into control of AFC West by early December. Chiefs hung tough in loss at Cincinnati.

Baltimore (8-7) at Oakland (5-10)
Ravens could have secured a wild-card berth by beating Pittsburgh last Sunday, and now face a potential spoiler in the Raiders.

Washington (4-11) at San Diego (12-3)
Jim Zorn's final game as Redskins coach. San Diego has won 10 straight, but figures to sit its regulars for much of this game.

Tennessee (7-8) at Seattle (5-10)
Titans want to finish off their remarkable turnaround from 0-6 with a .500 record. Seattle merely wants to finish another injury-ravaged flop.

COLTS

"You never want to lose a game, so obviously it hurt a little bit," defensive end Dwight Freeney said. "Obviously, there is that feeling that we should have won that game regardless of who is out there."

The loss also didn't sit well with many Colts fans and NFL purists who had been eager to see if the Colts could join the 1972 Dolphins and 2007 Patriots in winning every game in the regular season since the merger.

The bigger picture

A bigger priority for Colts coach Jim Caldwell was whether the price of perfection would be worth much if his players aren't rested for a more important run at the franchise winning its second Super Bowl in four seasons.

"There's no question that we certainly understand the fans," Caldwell said, referring to the criticism. "But overall, we have to make the decisions based on what we think puts us in the best position to win in the playoffs."

Caldwell hasn't determined how much playing time his starters will get today, but it's likely fans will see more Curtis Painter and far less Peyton.

"There's no question you're going to see him," Caldwell said, referring to Painter, the backup who struggled in going 4 of 11 for 44 yards with an interception and a costly fumble that was returned for the go-ahead touchdown by New York.

Manning refused to get drawn into the debate this week.

"I don't have a lot of reaction to it. ... I think it's time for the players to move on from it," he said. "Me, I'm kind of taking it day by day and working on things, working on weaknesses."

Who's kidding whom?

Manning has shown few weaknesses in yet another dominating season in which he's completed nearly 69 percent of his attempts, has 4,405 yards passing with 33 touchdowns and 15 interceptions.

By comparison, Manning has single-handedly outproduced the Bills, who have generated 3,979 yards offense and scored a mere 22 touchdowns.

Buffalo's gone through three quarterbacks after third-stringer Brian Brohm made his NFL debut in a 31-3 loss at Atlanta last weekend. It'll help that starter Ryan Fitzpatrick is expected to return after missing one game with an ankle injury.

Fitzpatrick expressed disappointment that the Colts lost last weekend.

"To be honest, I think it would have been cool for them to come in at 15-0 and for us to be the team that knocked them off," he said.

Any win would be welcome for interim coach Perry Fewell.

"It would make us feel a lot better," said Fewell, who's 2-4 since replacing Jauron. "We didn't accomplish a lot of the things that we set out to accomplish. But when you can end on a win, that would be fitting."

LOMAX

Those years included 59 wins, a pair of sectional and regional titles and one trip to the state finals. This year, the O's are 6-6.

"I played with all-stars throughout the whole thing, now it's falling on our shoulders," said Lomax, who has been on the varsity roster along with Kreigha Henney and Sidney Orso for four years. "It's been a harder transition because we've been the practice players ... but now it's up to us.

"We're getting the hang of it."

Brown said Lomax has improved in each of the four years.

"Even with her condition, she's gotten stronger physically," he said. "She's our inside presence.

"She's the one we depend on to rebound the basketball and to be a threat."

Lomax is also counted on to be a leader, a fun job with younger sister, Mikala, now earning some varsity minutes as a freshman.

"(Mikala) was always saying, 'Oh, I hope I play with you, blah, blah, blah,'" Erika said. "With this being my last year, it's been fun.

"It's been quite a ride."

The Longhorns won their first 12 games by at least 11 points. The Islanders (5-7) broke that streak by holding Texas to 35 percent shooting and outrebounding the Longhorns 47-37. If not for 25 turnovers, the Islanders may have may have had a chance to pull off the upset.

Anderson Varejao had 15 points and 12 rebounds, and Shaquille O'Neal finished with 12 points and nine boards for the Cavs.

Devin Harris scored 22 points and Brook Lopez 20 for the Nets, who started strong before the Cavs, who lead the league in field goal percentage defense, began to control the NBA's worst offensive team.

MIAMI — Stephen Jackson scored 13 of his season-high 35 points in the fourth quarter and D.J. Augustin added all 13 of his in the final 11 minutes as Charlotte won a road game for just the second time this season.

Jackson shot 11 of 20 from the floor, added eight rebounds, and his 3-pointer in front of the Heat bench with 1:50 left sealed it for Charlotte, which erased an early 19-point deficit and improved to 2-14 away from home.

Dwyane Wade finished with 29 points and 11 assists for Miami, which dropped its third straight and plays host to Atlanta and Boston before playing 20 of its next 27 games away from home. Quentin Richardson scored 20 for Miami, which got 14 from Michael Beasley and a 13-point, 10-rebound effort from Udonis Haslem.

Gerald Wallace scored 15 for Charlotte.

Tony Parker had 12 points for the Spurs, whose winning streak matches a season high. San Antonio has won four straight on the road and nine in a row against the Wizards.

Duncan's jump-hook gave the Spurs an 81-80 lead with 6:21 left in the game, and he followed that with two free throws as part of a decisive 12-2 run.

Caron Butler scored 24 points and Arenas added 23 for the Wizards, who have dropped four straight. Antawn Jamison had 17 points and nine rebounds.

UConn extends win streak to 51

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWARK, N.J. — Tina Charles scored 19 points and Kalana Greene added 16 to help top-ranked Connecticut rout Seton Hall 91-24 for the Huskies' 51st straight victory, in the Big East opener for both teams.

Maya Moore had 14 points for the Huskies (12-0), who have won every game during their streak by at least 10 points. The three stars combined to go 21 for 28 from the field.

The 51 straight victories is third all-time in Division I women's basketball history. UConn only trails its school-record 70 consecutive wins from 2001-03 and Louisiana Tech's 54 in a row from 1980-82.

The victory was the 800th in school history, making UConn the ninth school to achieve that milestone. It was also the Huskies' 26th straight win against Seton Hall with the last loss coming on Jan. 5, 1994. That was the only time the Pirates have beaten the Huskies in the last 42 meetings.

WOMEN'S ROUNDUP

No. 2 Stanford 79, California 58

STANFORD, Calif. — Nnemkadi Ogwumike had 24 points and a career-high 16 rebounds to help Stanford open the Pac-10 season with a dominating victory over archrival California.

Kayla Pedersen added 16 points and 10 rebounds and Jayne Appel scored 13 for the Cardinal (11-1, 1-0 Pac-10), who beat the Golden Bears (6-6, 0-1) for the 34th time in the past 37 meetings. Stanford has won 36 straight games at Maples Pavilion.

This was only the second time these Bay Area rivals opened the Pac-10 season against each other. But this meeting lacked the buildup to those in recent seasons when Cal was challenging Stanford for conference superiority. The Bears won at Maples Pavilion in 2007 and at home last season but fell short in the Pac-10 race each season.

No. 7 UNC 101, Winston-Salem St. 38

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Cetera DeGraffenreid scored 15 points and fiver other players scored in double figures to lead North Carolina in a rout of Winston-Salem State.

Taneisha White led Winston Salem State (2-10) with 10 points.

When the game was scheduled, the Rams were reclassifying members of NCAA Division I but the school announced in the fall that it would return to Division II next season.

No. 17 Texas 114, Ark.-Pine Bluff 53

AUSTIN, Texas — Ashleigh Fontenette had a perfect first half with 22 points on 9-of-9 shooting as Texas romped past Arkansas-Pine Bluff.

Texas' 114 points tied for the fourth most in school history.

Fontenette played only 10 minutes in the first half. Her first basket of the second half was a 3-pointer before misfiring on her 11th shot with about 14:30 left to play. Fontenette finished with 30 points, a season high for the Longhorns (10-3).

Kathleen Nash added 17 points for Texas, hitting five 3-pointers.

Jasmine Abrams scored 20 for Arkansas-Pine Bluff (1-10), which hasn't played a home game yet this season. The Lady Lions don't play at home until Jan. 16.

No. 22 Wis.-GB 78, Cleveland St. 60

CLEVELAND — Julie Wojta scored 24 points, Kayla Tetschlag had 21 and Wisconsin-Green Bay stayed unbeaten with a win over Cleveland State.

Wojta added seven rebounds and seven assists while shooting 9 of 10 from the floor. Celeste Hoewisch added 12 points and six assists for Wisconsin-Green Bay.

Shawnita Garland had 22 points for the Vikings (5-7, 0-1), who committed 24 turnovers. Cleveland State pulled to within 47-43 with 13:25 remaining, but went more than four minutes without a field goal as the Phoenix (12-0, 1-0) slowly pulled away.

Connecticut's Tina Charles (31) grabs a pass as Seton Hall's Whitney Wood (25) defends, during the second half of Saturday's game at Prudential Center in Newark, N.J.

Jessica Roque had 12 points for Cleveland State and Kailey Klein added 11.

No. 23 Virginia 74, Colorado 59

BOULDER, Colo. — Monica Wright scored 24 points and Whitny Edwards had 14 and nine rebounds as Virginia held off Colorado.

Bianca Smith had 23 points and Brittany Spears had 20 for the Buffaloes.

The Cavaliers (10-3) led by two at halftime before building a 46-35 lead midway through the second half. Colorado (9-3) rallied behind the hot shooting of Smith, who tied a season high with six 3-pointers. Smith hit four in the second half to get the Buffaloes within 52-50 with 5:50 remaining.

Wright, who was in foul trouble in the first half, helped the Cavaliers take control. She scored 11 points in the final 5:30 to hold off a furious rally by the Buffaloes. She fouled out with 1:18 remaining and the Cavaliers leading 69-58.

Colorado, which lost at Virginia by 34 last year, had won seven of its last eight.

No. 24 Georgia Tech 76, Army 47

ATLANTA — Alex Montgomery scored 21 points and Deja Foster had 12 points and 14 rebounds to lead Georgia Tech over Army.

Georgia Tech (13-2) also got 12 points from Sasha Goodblett and 11 from Brigitte Ardossi in winning its eighth straight game.

Erin Anthony led Army (6-7) with 26 points and seven rebounds.

Army trailed early but rallied to tie it at 17-all. Georgia Tech went on a 20-6 run fueled by 10 points from Montgomery to lead 37-23 at halftime.

A.J. Price would split those minutes because they gave the team the best opportunity to win. Ford had started 25 of Indiana's first 31 games. Watson and Price combined for 22 points, nine assists and three turnovers, and the Pacers, one of the league's worst teams in giveaways, committed only nine turnovers.

Indiana led 32-26 at the end of the first quarter then went on a 17-2 run over the first three minutes of the second to take control, making six of their first seven shots in the period.

The Pacers tied their season high for points in a half on a 3-pointer by Rush that put them up 69-40 with 1:51 left in the second quarter. Indiana shot 61 percent in the period and led 73-45 at halftime.

Minnesota scored 40 points in the third quarter to cut Indiana's lead to 98-85 heading into the fourth.

Notes

- McRoberts made only the second 3-pointer of his career in the first quarter.
- Minnesota F Damien Wilkins was assessed a technical foul for shoving Solomon Jones in the third quarter.
- The Pacers improved to 5-10 without injured F Danny Granger.

Wildlife federation, sportsmen's roundtable merge

Two of the most important Indiana conservation organizations have joined forces.

The Indiana Wildlife Federation (IWF) has assumed administrative control of the Indiana Sportsmen's Roundtable (ISR). The IWF and the ISR shall remain separate organizations, but they will be administered jointly.

The goal is revitalizing the ISR and returning it to prominence as Indiana' strongest lobbying organization for sportsmen.

Indiana is home to numerous conservation organizations aimed at promoting and protecting hunting and fishing in our great state.

Brandon Butler

Groups such as Indiana Bowhunter Association, Dubois County Sportsmen Club and Indiana Smallmouth Alliance are just a few doing what they can individually to promote and protect Hoosier hunting and fishing.

As most team players understand, efforts of a collective whole are usually stronger than the efforts of individuals.

The IWF has over 50 affiliated member organizations already working together to support Indiana's wildlife. By combining the IWF and the ISR into a conservation lobbying group, the ISR begins its return to power with a solid foundation.

"The goals of the new ISR are few and simple," IWF Executive Director John Goss said. "It is our intention to build a large membership base, keep those members informed of issues that concern them as Indiana sportsmen and women and present their views on those issues to the Indiana Legislature and Indiana DNR."

Members and money

The accomplishment of these goals shall be pursued through channels of active lobbying at the Indiana General Assembly, consensus building and issue position statements, representation with Indiana DNR rule and policy making meetings and regular communications with all ISR member organizations.

The newly formed Board of Directors for the ISR reads like a who's who of Indiana conservation all-stars.

Gene Hopkins, who has been an instrumental member of the Indiana Bowhunter Association for years, will serve as the new chairman of the ISR Board of Directors.

The remaining board members include: Bud Dennemann, a longtime member of the National Wild Turkey Federation; Doug McPherson, the owner of The Outdoorsman Sport Shop in Greenwood; Greg Seketa, a founding member of the Indiana Sportsmen's Roundtable; Eric Simpson, a dedicated fly fisherman and conservationist; Goss; and Kyle Hupfer, a former DNR Director.

In order for the IWF and ISR to effectively function, they need two things: members and money.

Individuals can join for $15 a year. Organizations join as a whole and prices are determined on a sliding scale. Organizations with 2-25 members pay $50 per year, 26-50 members pay $100, and 50+ pay $150.

Mail registration payments as well as the name and address of your organization, and phone numbers and e-mail addresses of two contact people to: Indiana Sportsmen's Roundtable, 4715 W. 106th Street, Zionsville, IN 46135.

Check for Dickcissel's yellow plumage

A Dickcissel, a 5¾ inch bird, to me is a rare and delightful bird to see and you must watch your feeder closely or you will miss it.

You will probably mistake it, and easily could, for a sparrow, but look closely and you will see a sparrow-like bird. The male has a small line of bright yellow over its eye, a pronounced black bib bordered with a yellow chest and upper breast patch. The belly is white. He has a brownish, reddish shoulder wing patch.

I must confess I have seen very few of these birds. In early December 1973, I saw them briefly in this area. Then in January 1982 in Ruskin, Fla., I saw a flock of them. On March 21, 1982, they visited us.

This little sparrow-sized bird got its name from the song it sings. Its song is one or two "dicks" followed by a deep-throated trill, a low br-r-r-rrt sound.

These little birds can be common migrants one winter, rare the next, absent some years and then a common visitor the next. There is no way to predict when we will have them.

It is quite possible at a glance to mistake a male Dickcissel for a male English sparrow. Look for his yellow plumage.

The Dickcissel's food in warm climate is canker worms, cutworms, beetles, caterpillars and snails. This bird does eat seeds and will come to your feeder. It likes grass and weed seeds.

Hellen Ochs

It is a ground nester and should some Dickcissels stay in this area, which isn't likely, its nest would be on the ground. The nest is made of some leaves, dried grass, rootlets and where possible strips of corn husk, lined with hair and fine grass.

The clutch will be four to five, unmarked light blue eggs.

One naturalist has said, "It is one of our most interesting birds, not alone on account of its beauty, but because it varies greatly in number in different localities, and in the same localities in different years."

In Dickcissel years it frequents grassland, meadows, pastures, airports, and cultivated fields such as hay fields.

Image fighters

For image fighting birds, such as Cardinals, my old standby:

Lightweight plastic fringe.

A plastic bag, such as one from the dry cleaners, is good. Split it open until it is one sheet. Then, starting at the bottom of the sheet, cut a fringe up to about three inches from the top, making a border. Place this over the window, on the outside. The slightest breeze will distort the cardinal's view of what he thinks is a male cardinal invading his territory. This is usually a spring happening at nesting time, this fall's warm weather has confused the cardinal.

Gift ideas for your birding friends are bird books, bird feeders, nesting and roosting boxes, binoculars and scopes. I don't know a birder who would not welcome a gift of birdseed for their bird feeders any time.

Famous S.F. sea lions leave in droves

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Two mysteries surround a huge herd of sea lions that were hanging out on a pier in San Francisco Bay: Why did so many show up, and why did so many leave at once?

Just last month, Pier 39, famous in San Francisco for its sea lions and the throngs of tourists they attract, was groaning under the weight of more than 1,500 of the animals. The record number delighted tourists and baffled experts.

Marine experts suspect the sea lions came and stayed for the food, then left largely for the same reason.

"Most likely, they left chasing a food source," said Jeff Boehm, executive director of the Marine Mammal Center in Sausalito, which runs an information center and gift shop at Pier 39. "It's probably what kept them here in the first place."

The animals began leaving in droves the day after Thanksgiving, almost as if someone had issued an order. But Boehm said the fact that so many sea lions stayed for so long is even stranger than their disappearance.

"They do move off," Boehm said, adding that in the fall, older sea lions head to breeding colonies in the Channel Islands, off the coast of Southern California along the Santa Barbara Channel. Younger sea lions, he said, "don't mind those rules and tend to travel far and wide."

On Tuesday, 10 sea lions lounged and swam and dove from the docks, spreading themselves out where the animals were stacked three and four deep just a month ago. The bulk of the herd probably followed their favorite foods, sardines and anchovies, Boehm said.

The younger ones still sticking around Pier 39 were enough to satisfy hordes of visitors huddled against the wind to watch them. The sea lions huddled together, dove off the docks, and honked and barked.

"We're happy with what we see," said Carmen Fernandez of Miami Beach, Fla., who was watching the sea lions with her husband Carlos.

Despite the sea lions' abrupt disappearance, Boehm said the Marine Mammal Center is not concerned that they have departed for good. While more than the usual number have left — usually about 40 remain — it is very unlikely, Boehm said, that they won't come back. By spring, the herd will probably be back, as usual, he said.

Young fishermen tough to catch

BY JAY LINDSAY
Associated Press

BOSTON — Joe Sava's legs have absorbed the ocean's pitch and roll from the deck of a fishing boat for four decades. At age 75, the Gloucester fisherman says just trying to stay upright at sea can wear him down.

"It takes a toll," Sava says. "The younger guys can do it."

Trouble is, he and other fishing boat captains say, not many younger guys are working New England waters these days.

Fishermen say that because of years of onerous regulations and the rising, six-figure cost of permits, fewer and fewer young people are becoming boat captains. That's left lots of old salts like Sava doing the grueling job out of both love and necessity.

And they worry about their own safety and the future of an industry that has been vital to New England's economy and its very character since colonial days.

"The door is slamming shut," Sava says.

The National Marine Fisheries Service does not keep statistics on fishermen's ages, but state figures back up the sea captains' observations. Since 2000, the median age of Massachusetts holders of commercial fishing permits — that is, boat owners and owner-captains — has climbed from 46 to nearly 51, according to the state Division of Marine Fisheries.

Pat Kurkul, the Northeast regional administrator for the fisheries service, said she believes that the industry is still a draw to young people and that the current rebuilding plan will ensure the industry is attractive to newcomers for years to come.

Over the past decade, regulators trying to stop overfishing have imposed ever-tighter rules that have left as few as 24 fishing days this year for fishermen who catch cod, haddock, flounder and other so-called groundfish. The fishing fleet in the Northeast has shrunk as result, falling to just under 600 working groundfish boats in 2007 from about 1,100 in 2001.

Meanwhile, Northeast groundfish revenue dropped from about $71 million in 2004 to about $62 million in 2008, and the catch fell from about 77 million pounds to 66 million.

As the chance to fish has become more scarce, it has also become exponentially more expensive. Government-issued fishing permits that were bought and sold among fishermen for a few thousand dollars in the mid-1990s go for at least $200,000 nowadays.

Lee Schatvet, a 21-year-old fisherman from Rye Harbor, N.H., would like to run his own boat but figures he would need $400,000 to $500,000 for a decent vessel, gear and a permit. And a young man with a limited credit history has little chance of securing that kind of money.

"It's basically impossible to get into the industry nowadays," Schatvet said.

Weary visitors find relief in 'city of spas'

By Carey J. Williams
Associated Press

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Sometimes called the "city of spas," Budapest is home to over a dozen thermal spas. The bathhouses make perfect destinations for weary tourists, sore backpackers, and families — as well as hung-over concert-goers.

I visited two of Budapest's biggest and most visited baths, Szechenyi and Gellert last summer. They were filled with 20-somethings wearing bracelets from the annual Sziget festival, a seven-day music event that's one of the biggest in Europe.

Many of my fellow spa-goers looked like they could have used some of the healing powers the therapeutic waters have to offer. A week of partying can have that effect on your facial expressions.

The Szechenyi baths are located in City Park. The Neo-Baroque building is beautiful inside and out.

The three outside pools are decorated with various statues of water gods and marine life. Many of the statues have hot water shooting out, creating popular spots for hot water massages.

Visitors have their choice of 18 pools, five swimming pools and 13 thermal baths. The water temperatures range from 68 to 104 degrees Fahrenheit.

The inside is huge and made up of many different rooms, making it easy to get lost. In addition to hot and cold pools, there are sauna and steam rooms at various temperatures. There was even a pool with medicinal mineral water.

Bathhouses with indoor pools are open year-round, of course, but Szechenyi also has one huge hot pool outside that remains open all winter, with clouds of steam rising into the cold air.

Several outdoor pools outside of Budapest also operate in the winter, including those in Harkany, Heviz, Visegrad, Egerszalok and Hajduszoboszlo.

Associated Press

In this photo taken on Aug. 12, the Neo-Baroque building at Szechenyi Bath and Spa surrounds the outdoor pools.

Collected drawings

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — A museum is showing artwork collected by a Delta flight attendant who started handing out crayons to passengers after the Sept. 11th attacks.

The Palm Springs Air Museum is showing "Plane Art — Connecting People" through Jan. 25. Several dozen pictures are hanging at the museum, and many others are available for visitors to leaf through in folders.

The pictures were collected by Delta flight attendant Jewel Van Valin. She got the idea a few months after 9/11, when the airline began substituting paper for linens as tray table covers.

Updated guide

NEW YORK — Just in time for the 2010 Winter Olympic Games, Zagat has released an updated guide to Vancouver, with recommendations for restaurants and attractions in the city as well as for the ski resort town of Whistler and for beautiful Vancouver Island, which is reachable from Vancouver by ferry and air.

Most popular attractions in Vancouver, according to the 2,721 surveyors who participated in ratings for the guide, are Stanley Park; Vancouver Aquarium; Museum of Anthropology at the University of British Columbia; the Capilano Suspension Bridge through a forest of tall trees; and Dr. Sun Yat-Sen Classical Chinese Garden.

Most popular nightlife spots, according to the Zagat surveyors, are the Opus Bar, the Commodore Ballroom, Bacchus Lounge, Celebrities and the Shark Club.

Best '10 travel

OAKLAND, Calif. — If you're looking for inspiration for a trip in the new year, Lonely Planet's "Best in Travel 2010" offers trends, destinations and experiences around the world.

The travel guidebook's top 10 countries for 2010 are El Salvador, Germany, Greece, Malaysia, Morocco, Nepal, New Zealand, Portugal, Suriname and the U.S. Top 10 cities for next year, according to Lonely Planet, are Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates; Charleston, S.C.; Cork, Ireland; Cuenca, Ecuador; Istanbul, Turkey; Kyoto, Japan; Lecce, Italy; Sarajevo, Bosnia-Herzegovina; Singapore and Vancouver, Canada.

Best value destinations for next year are Iceland, Thailand, London, South Africa, Malaysia, Mexico, India, Bulgaria, Kenya and Las Vegas.

Casino opens

DODGE CITY, Kan. — A casino has opened in Dodge City, reviving memories of the once-raucous cowtown that inspired television's "Gunsmoke."

The casino complex opened with 20,000 square feet of gambling space, 584 slot machines and 12 tables for blackjack, poker, craps and roulette, along with a bar, a restaurant and a snack bar. The second phase, to be completed by 2012, includes a 124-room hotel.

Dodge City seemed a natural site for a casino to some local officials and legislators, given its history as a wicked western town in the 1870s and 1880s and a place where famed lawman Wyatt Earp also was a dealer for a card game called faro. The city once had 18 or 19 saloons — including the famous Long Branch — and most had gambling, said Jeff Thorpe, the president of a local group that lobbied for the casino law.

Popular planetarium

CARTERSVILLE, Ga. — The planetarium at the Tellus Northwest Georgia Science Museum is seeing three times the normal attendance for an attraction that size.

The digital planetarium passed 100,000 visitors in mid-December after less than a year of operation. Visitors to the 120-seat planetarium runs four different shows multiple times throughout the day on topics from the history of space travel to an animated children's show.

The new museum in northwest Georgia has drawn nearly 200,000 visitors since it opened in January. It features mineral and fossil galleries, hands-on exhibits where visitors can dig for shark teeth and a gallery dedicated to aviation.

Visitors find distractions while waiting to fly

By Beth J. Harpaz
Associated Press

NEW YORK — With the latest terrorist incident over U.S. skies, air travelers are more on edge than usual and security lines are even longer. But if you're looking for something to distract yourself from all the worries and the waiting, a few airports actually offer unique attractions.

Not that it will make the lines shorter, but checking out the stuffed polar bear at the Anchorage airport, playing slots at the Vegas airport or watching live music at the Austin airport might just bring a smile to your face on an otherwise stressful day.

Associated Press

Top: The Detroit Metro Airport has an attraction in the McNamara Terminal that was designed to represent global travel routes. Forty-five water jets are choreographed in changing patterns to symbolize airline flight paths, while longitude and latitude lines are marked in black granite. Above: This undated photo shows some of the nearly 1,300 slot machines at McCarran Airport in Las Vegas.

Las Vegas

You don't have to go all the way to the Strip to gamble in Vegas; you can start in as soon as your plane lands. McCarran Airport has nearly 1,300 slot machines, and they generated over $30 million in revenue for the airport in the last fiscal year, according to airport spokesman Chris Jones.

Anchorage, Alaska

Ask for directions at Ted Stevens Anchorage International Airport and somebody might just tell you to take a left at the polar bear. The taxidermed animal, posed in an upright position, towers over passers-by in the North Terminal, and is just one of more than a half-dozen stuffed bears at the airport. Other wildlife on display there includes a ram, a beaver, several geese, a deer, a fox, two wolves, a salmon and a 400-pound halibut, according to the Alaska Travel Industry Association.

Airport manager John Parrot says the 7-foot-tall (2-meter-tall) polar bear is a "universal meeting point for that building. A few years ago we even had a couple get married at the polar bear."

Charlotte, NC

Pull up a rocking chair, make yourself comfy and set awhile. That's not the usual expectation at an airport, but the atrium at Charlotte Douglas International Airport in North Carolina is lined with trees and white wooden rocking chairs, just like what you might find on a friendly Southern front porch. The rockers were first placed in the atrium in 1997 as part of a photo exhibit called "Porchsitting," but they were so popular that they became a permanent fixture.

The rockers, made by Portico Furniture, have now been installed in 16 other airports, including Seattle, San Diego and Dallas/Fort Worth.

Detroit

Detroit Metropolitan Airport is in the news right now because that's where the plane landed after a passenger allegedly tried to detonate an explosive device onboard on Christmas Day.

But before that incident, the airport was famous among travelers for something beautiful, not something scary: a fountain designed to represent global travel routes.

The attraction includes 45 water jets choreographed in changing patterns to symbolize airline flight paths. Longitude and latitude lines are marked in black granite.

The water feature, located in Concourse A at the McNamara Terminal, was installed to offer a measure of tranquility in a hectic place. Tranquility is something jittery travelers need even more now than when it opened in 2002.

Austin, Texas

If you're heading to a vacation in Austin, chances are you'll be checking out the music scene. But you don't have to wait till you get into the city to hear a local band or singer. At the Austin-Bergstrom International Airport, 11 live music performances are offered each week for ticketed passengers, located on a stage next to Ray Benson's roadhouse in the center of the terminal building on the concourse level.

Baltimore

The blue crab is Maryland's official state crustacean. And there's a big one on the upper level at Baltimore-Washington International Airport, but it didn't crawl out of the Chesapeake Bay. It's a colorful stained-glass sculpture, 10 feet long and 5½ feet high, designed by Jackie Leatherbury Douglass, and beloved by locals.

Chicago

The House of Blues store in Midway Airport's Terminal A has a couple of life-size statues of the Blues Brothers, depicting John Belushi and Dan Aykroyd. One set of statues shows them dancing in their black suits, sunglasses and hats; the other set shows them seated. Travelers love to pose for pictures with these guys.

Drawn to star of nativity scenes

By Brian Sanders
bsanders@therepublic.com

NORTH VERNON — New Year's is the time most people begin taking down Christmas decorations and Joyce Deaton is no different.

What is different is that not many people have to wrap and carefully stow away more than 500 nativity scene decorations.

The Jennings County woman estimates that she has about 550 items depicting the birth of Jesus Christ, which she clearly believes is the true meaning of the Christmas season.

There are a handful of Santa Claus decorations in her collection, but even they pay tribute to Christ's birth.

Aside from statuettes, Deaton's collections includes nativity clocks, throws, pillows, paintings, tapestries, even a two-man saw hanging over a doorway in her kitchen.

She inherited the saw from her parents, but she had friend and local artist Marilyn Clark paint it to match her décor.

Deaton has another of Clark's traditional paintings hanging year round in her living room, it also depicts a nativity.

Throughout Deaton's farmhouse sit all manner of nativity decorations and a few have made their way out onto the porch or perched atop the flag pole.

They hail from all around the globe including Mexico, Germany, the Bahamas and Ecuador.

Just this year, a friend gave her a nativity scene of carved wood manufactured in Jerusalem.

Each of the nativities is different, some are the size of a fingertip, and one of them is close to 4 or 5 feet tall.

Some are traditional; others feature children or stylized bears in place of more familiar figures.

The true beginning of Deaton's unique collection eludes even her, but she figures it began about 1973 when a neighbor built and gave her first nativity for Christmas.

From there, she said

Cheatham to run in District 69 6th time

By Brian Sanders
bsanders@therepublic.com

NORTH VERNON — State Rep. Dave Cheatham, D-North Vernon, has announced his intention to seek re-election and a sixth term representing District 69 in the Indiana General Assembly.

DAVE CHEATHAM

Cheatham, who also represents Jennings, Jefferson and Ripley counties returned to the post in 2006 after serving from 1984 to 1992.

"Because we are looking at challenging times, we need to keep leaders with the experience and commitment to fight for their community to get the resources and opportunities to make the future better," Cheatham said, explaining his motivation for seeking re-election.

"By working together, we can make great strides in economic development and job creation — these are the greatest needs at this time to improve our quality of life," he added.

"At the same time, we need to move forward with property tax reform and providing affordable educational opportunities."

Cheatham believes public service is about improving the lives of his constituents by listening to them and acting as their voice at the Statehouse.

Most recently, Cheatham authored improvements in "Molly's Law," which provides better law-enforcement procedures in missing person's cases.

He also penned business legislation that helps the tool-and-die industry and homeowners' association legislation, provides more protection to the rights of people living in planned communities.

According to a release from his office, Cheatham also was instrumental in securing a $2 million grant for water resource development and distribution in Jennings County for the Muscatatuck Urban Training Center as part of the 2009 state budget.

"This grant will not only help provide a more reliable and less expensive water supply for MUTC to help our troops train to defend our country but will also provide a major boost to economic development in the region by allowing MUTC to expand," he explained.

Cheatham also had a hand in getting $2 million bridge rehabilitation and rail upgrade grant for the Madison Railroad, giving District 69 a competitive advantage for jobs by ensuring access to a first-rate short line railroad, the release stated.

All told, Cheatham in 2009 brought in $18 million in grants for

N.V. photographer learned craft at early age

NORTH VERNON — All the car trips around Jennings County with her parents, snapping pictures with her Tweety Bird camera seem to have paid off for Melodie Ramey.

The North Vernon native and 1995 Jennings County High School graduate has amassed an impressive portfolio of photographs, many of which have been displayed in other communities such as Madison.

Beginning Tuesday and throughout January, visitors to A Perfect Day Café can check out Ramey's photographs and illustrations in her first North Vernon exhibit entitled "An Indiana Lullaby".

"I'm so excited," she said of showing her in Jennings County for the first time.

From 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, the café will host a reception with musical entertainment provided by Eric Davis, Ramey's friend and fellow 1995 JCHS graduate.

For years, Davis has performed in a handful of North Vernon and Indianapolis rock bands. For the reception he will play some original acoustic folk rock selections.

Ramey often chooses nature and candid shots of people in her photography, often opting for black and white over color photos.

Campbell looks to tighten city's 2010 budget

By Brian Sanders
bsanders@therepublic.com

NORTH VERNON — Faced with an economy that likely will continue struggling in 2010, North Vernon, like many other Indiana cities, is learning to get by with less.

Looking ahead to the new year, Mayor Harold "Soup" Campbell expects a 2010 city budget leaner than the already scaled back 2009 budget.

City officials are expecting between $225,000 and $300,000 less in property tax revenue in 2010 than the city received in 2009, according to Campbell.

The reason for that is the graduated implementation of state-mandated property tax caps that will go into full effect in 2011.

The caps ultimately will limit property taxes to 1 percent of the assessed value of a person's home.

Similarly, taxes for owners of rental and farm properties are limited to 2 percent of their assessed value and 3 percent for business properties.

HAROLD CAMPBELL

While that benefits taxpayers, it forces city and county governments to trim their budgets.

"Right now it's belt-tightening," Campbell said the afternoon of New Year's Eve.

Even on Thursday, Campbell was going over budget numbers between wedding ceremonies he officiated.

Traditionally, the city's budget for the following year is ready by October or November.

However, city officials still are awaiting word from the county as to what kind of property tax revenue they can expect.

The mayor doesn't expect the public will notice a difference in services with the city's leaner budget.

Campbell said the city will be more frugal with things like gasoline and likely will put on hold anticipated purchases of big-ticket items like a new compactor truck for the city's sanitation department.

Patrolmen with the North Vernon Police Department will have to patrol more efficiently and street department employees will have to work smarter, he said.

Recently, the North Vernon City Council approved freezing salaries for city employees, which Campbell commended.

The move eliminated the need for layoffs, but will have a ripple effect for city retirees receiving pensions.

Furthermore, council members recently voted to cut out extra council meetings and docked their pay as a cost-cutting measure.

Campbell expects an even tougher time budgeting for 2011 when the tax caps are in full effect.

"We've got to tighten it up even more."

That could make for difficult decisions with the possibility of personnel cuts.

However, Campbell hopes any personnel cutbacks can be covered by the natural attrition of employees retiring or taking jobs elsewhere.

Once those positions are vacated, they likely will not be filled by a new hire.

However, Campbell noted that the city has already committed money to various projects like helping fund new park land and contributing matching funds to the renovation of Hayden Pike.

"Really it's a juggling act," Campbell said.

One project the mayor would hate to see placed on the back burner is rehabilitating the Carnegie Library building, which recently was turned over to the city by the county government.

Campbell hopes to one day move city hall into the now-vacant Walnut Street building.

About five years ago, an architect estimated that it would take about $750,000 to improve the building and make it compliant to today's codes and standards.

However, the mayor believes many of the improvements like cleaning, weatherizing and completing basic repairs can be done in-house.

Campbell was unsure if the building's heating and cooling plants could be salvaged.

Looking to 2010, Campbell also intends to continue his focus on securing new water sources for North Vernon, be it through local wells, area reservoirs or buying water from Jennings Water.

He noted that in 2009, the city received grant money from Washington D.C. for water improvement projects and he expects more in 2010.

Campbell said moving forward with the improvements is just a matter of finding the best option and sufficient funding.

Library updates computer, Net usage, policies

Staff Reports

NORTH VERNON — Jennings County Public Library has announced changes to its computer and Internet policies.

Beginning Wednesday, patrons will be faced with a new sign-in process aimed at streamlining computer and wireless Internet use at the library.

Patrons will need to have JCPL or Evergreen library cards to log on to those services.

Those who do not live in Jennings County will need a guest card from the circulation desk to use computers and wireless Internet.

Once they find an available computer, patrons will need only sign in using the barcode number from their library card.

If more time is needed, patrons can extend the time limit for computer usage, provided no one is waiting in line.

If no computers are available, patrons can add their name to a waiting list at the kiosk, which also will display the projected wait.

Wireless Internet users can log onto the JCPL network using their JCPL and Evergreen cards.

Another addition is that wireless users will now be able to use the library's printer.

Roundup

Pay freeze approved

NORTH VERNON — The City Council voted to approve a salary freeze at its final meeting of the year on Monday. The decision rescinded a previously approved 3-percent pay raise for city workers.

Officials are bracing for lower revenues with the graduated implementation of property tax caps.

The council also approved the addition of Presidents' Day and Columbus Day to city workers' holiday calendar by a margin of three votes to two.

Despite recent advances, Cheatham remains motivated to making further progress on several important issues.

Chief among those issues is the creation of jobs.

The former high school teacher also wants to ensure that students have top-rate and affordable education.

Improvements in the district's transportation system--including roads and highways as well as a new Ohio River bridge for Jefferson County—also rank among Cheatham's priorities.

Many new projects are ready to begin or are already in progress, according to the release.

Meaningful and permanent property tax reform is an essential need for all Hoosiers, Cheatham added.

"I believe that owning one's home at some point in time without any future property taxes is a fundamental value, one which I hope to be able to accomplish as a goal," he said.

To aid in the somewhat difficult task of picking just 20 examples of her work for the North Vernon show, Ramey said she selected pieces related to Jennings County.

Many of her early experience behind the camera came when her parents took her as a child on car rides through the countryside.

She then began entering her photos in 4-H contests and in high school Ramey worked as a photographer on the school's yearbook staff.

"I've wanted to be a photographer since I was 5 years old," she explained.

"I actually still have my first camera; it's got a Tweety Bird on it."

Since April 2008, Judy Ross, owner of A Perfect Day Café has featured local artists, granting them month-long exhibitions.

Ross hopes the exhibits will raise the community's awareness of local talent and might lead to the opening of a full-fledged art gallery in Jennings County.

Sports teams faced highs, lows in 2009

STAFF REPORTS
sports@therepublic.com

Another year has passed, so it's time to look back at 2009 in Jennings County High School athletics.

Here are some of the top stories that drew the attention of our staff in the past 12 months.

Surprise to state

Jennings County athletes appearing as individuals in the IHSAA State Finals have been a fairly regular occurrence.

However, there were few bigger surprises than the successes of two senior boys last year in two separate sports.

Luke Armand, a wrestler, and David Ertel, a sprinter, shocked many by advancing to the state finals in their final years in their respective sports.

Armand said he'd always dreamed of doing enough on the mat to have his picture on the wall outside of Jennings County's gym, a spot reserved for the top performers in the program's proud wrestling tradition.

Yet it seemed unlikely as Armand was relegated to runner-up status in the sectional and regional, leaving qualifying for the state finals out of the always-loaded Evansville Semistate as his last chance at earning a spot on the wall.

Armand did just that, finishing fourth at 140 pounds and getting the chance to compete at Conseco Fieldhouse in the state finals.

"The hard work pays off, and this just shows it," Armand said.

Meanwhile, Ertel's trip didn't seem so unlikely before the season. After all, the senior had been to the state finals as a sophomore before injuries derailed his junior campaign.

It seemed to be going much the same for Ertel as a senior as he missed a great deal of time dealing with a bothersome hamstring injury.

In fact, Ertel barely snuck out of the sectional, finishing fourth just to earn a spot in the regional.

Once there, Ertel ran his best time of the season — 51.95 seconds — to slip into the state finals for the second time in his high school career.

"It feels great," Ertel said of finishing his career in Bloomington.

ANDREW LAKER | THE REPUBLIC

Jennings County running back Iyan Bass breaks a tackle from Eli Schoettmer of Columbus East on his way to scoring a touchdown in September.

Girls go out strong

Four times Katie Jackson and Malory Hurtle played tennis for Jennings County in the sectional.

And four times the Panthers came away champions.

Jackson (No. 1 singles) and Hurtle (No. 2 singles) capped stellar high school careers with an easy sectional title, handily dismissing the opposition at the Greensburg Sectional.

In total, the Panthers had eight seniors on their roster with six of them playing in the sectional.

"It's a great feeling," coach Charlinda Evans said. "We really have worked for this.

"We have eight seniors, and it's something you hope to be able to accomplish."

Magner's milestone

Tori Magner capped a brilliant four-year career on the girls soccer team with one momentous milestone.

Magner surpassed the 100-goal mark in a win against South Dearborn in October.

"I never thought I'd get to 100," Magner said. "My team has helped me out so much getting there, and without them, I wouldn't be where I'm at now."

Her final season would, however, end in disappointing fashion as she suffered a knee injury late in the year.

Therefore, she was not full strength as Jennings' season ended in the sectional finals against Columbus North.

Bass' big year

Under new coach Scott Buening, Jennings County's football team showed improvement as it won three games and could easily have won a few more.

Leading the way for Buening's bruising running attack was sophomore tailback Iyan Bass.

He rolled to 1,527 yards in his sophomore season, earning Honorable Mention All-State honors and being named first-team All-Hoosier Hills Conference. Bass' 15 touchdowns led the area.

His carries, yards and touchdowns were single-season school records.

In fact, after two years, Bass already had the school record for career rushing touchdowns and is just a paltry 23 yards from tying the career rushing yardage record.

Basketball struggles

It wasn't entirely a positive year as Jennings County's most high-profile sport suffered its worst season ever.

The Panthers' boys basketball team went just 2-19 in Scott Holdsworth's lone season.

Things haven't gone getter with first-year coach Dean Foster now in charge.

Jennings County is 0-8 to start the 2009-10 season and won't have a shot to pick up a win until Jan. 8, 2010, vs. Bedford North Lawrence.

In total, the Panthers won just one game in 2009, a 68-58 win against Hoosier Hills Conference foe Floyd Central on Jan. 23.

BRIAN SANDERS | THE REPUBLIC

Joyce Deaton's collection of nativity-themed decorations features a variety of forms like clocks, pillows, flags, throws and tapestries like this one.

STAR

her goal was to have one nativity for each room of the house.

Clearly, she didn't stop there.

This year, Deaton invited her friend over to see the "monster" she had created.

It takes her about three weeks to get all of her decorations out of storage and another three to put them away, she said.

She basically has to clear her walls and shelves, putting away her china to make room for the decorations and she doesn't mind a bit.

Her husband of 44 years, Bob, enjoys the display.

"I'd like to leave them up all year, but you'd have to dust them," he said.

Seeing so many nativity decorations, Deaton notices a difference that a casual observer likely would miss.

For instance of her 550 exhibits, only three depict Joseph holding the baby Jesus.

Each year, Deaton figures she has enough, but without fail she is given or buys one that is just a little different.

That's not to say she's above hunting for a bargain.

She often finds the best deals on nativity scenes in the weeks leading up to Christmas when things just seem to find their way into her shopping cart.

Alan Alda sparks to the human race in a new PBS miniseries

By Jay Bobbin
Zap2it

What is that certain something that makes someone not only the individual he or she is but also someone fully human?

Alan Alda wants to know.

The Emmy-winning actor, director and writer turns social scientist again by reteaming with the company behind "Scientific American Frontiers" to host "The Human Spark," a three-part PBS documentary miniseries premiering Wednesday, Jan. 6 (check local listings).

With Alda participating in many interviews and demonstrations, the program details scientific views of traits that set the human race apart from the world's other species, including chimpanzees, which have most of the same DNA as people. The creation and use of a spear is one example used to survey the levels and extent of human thought - and yes, Alda does make and throw a spear himself in the show.

"With only five minutes of working on the tool, I was up to the Neanderthal ability," the veteran of "M*A*S*H" and "The West Wing" muses. "They had a couple of million years to work on it. I mean, I thought that was pretty swift."

It also illustrates a major point made by "The Human Spark," the similarities through the ages in basic human practices despite advanced studies and technologies. Alda's own brain becomes a major playing field in the miniseries' concluding episode.

"I've spent all my life as an actor trying to learn how to relate," Alda reflects, "because that's really at the heart of being an actor. The only training I ever had was in improvising, and that's where you got the scene, what you tossed back and forth (with another actor). What interests me a lot is what that kind of lifelong search turns out to be."

It also intrigues executive producer Graham Chedd, who filled the same job on "Scientific American Frontiers" ... which modified its approach with Alda's arrival, by making him a frequent on-camera surrogate for the viewer.

"Alan and I came up with the idea for this project about five years ago, just as 'Frontiers' was winding down," Chedd says. "We would spend a lot of time on the road together, having dinners and chatting about what we'd learned that day."

Jared Lipworth, another executive producer of "The Human Spark," maintains Alda's involvement in the new project is essential.

"He's able to get the scientists out of their lecture 'comfort zone,' which they so often want to go into," Lipworth says. "As soon as there's something that is 'their' topic, they do it the way they always do it.

"By asking the kinds of questions (Alda does) and by getting familiar, we're able to get them out of that (pattern) and into a way that conveys (the information) the way the viewers want to watch it."

Alda adds, "We've heard over and over again that probably no other animals relate the way we do in trying to understand what's going on in the other (creature's) mind. They're probably not even aware that there is another mind in most cases, but in addition to that, there's the working together toward a goal.

"The ability to cooperate is very special among us, apparently. (Given) the same effort that makes our armies work so well when they fight other armies - and cooperation really blooms then - wouldn't it be interesting if we could bring that cooperation to the two warring parties in the first place?"

Funding for "The Human Spark" was secured with considerable assistance from PBS' New York flagship station WNET, but Chedd admits that in the current economic climate, "I don't know whether it would be possible to do that again. Corporate funding is essentially set for very few high-profile projects (done by) public television, and it's going to be tough to do something like this again."

Because of his acting career, Alda and his PBS colleagues have mastered the art of rearranging schedules at a moment's notice.

"We were all set to go to Alaska," Alda recalls, "and the call from (filmmaker Martin) Scorsese came in to do 'The Aviator' (for which Alda was Oscar-nominated). I really wanted to work with him, and I loved the part. (Chedd's production partner) John Angier had to call all these world-class scientists in Alaska and say that I couldn't be there, so they had to postpone it for a month or so."

but we'd bet on one in late spring or early summer. The green light for that often hinges on which contenders for the bachelor's heart show the potential to be a "Bachelorette," and we'll discover that over the coming weeks.

Q: What has happened to Peter Strauss of "The Jericho Mile" and "Masada"? —Zelda Quiring, Bullhead City, Ariz.

A: The Emmy-winning actor has been heard but not seen, as narrator of the Showtime series "Tracey Ullman's State of the Union" (which starts its third season Jan. 25). He also supplied several character voices for the animated show "Biker Mice From Mars." As for having his face matched to his voice, Strauss appeared in an episode of ABC's now-defunct "Dirty Sexy Money," and his recent movies have included "License to Wed" (as Mandy Moore's father) and "XXX: State of the Union" (as the U.S. president).

Dear Jax,

How do zippers zip??

Taylor Waxman
Santa Monica, California

Beakman or Jax
1130 Walnut St.
Kansas City, MO 64106
Question & your city/state

Dear Taylor,
Zippers zipping has a lot to do with plowing. They were named after popular rubbers – a kind of galoshes – the rubber shoe, not the thick stew.

Zippers are about hooks being jammed into each other by the slider, which turns up-and-down zipping action into back-and-forth, sideways work.

When opening, the slider plows apart the hooks using the mechanical advantage one gets from an inclined plane, usually called a ramp, or a wedge.

Jax Place
Jax Place

Plowing & Zippers

WHAT YOU NEED:
Wooden board or sheet of heavy cardboard - thread - small cardboard box - small rocks

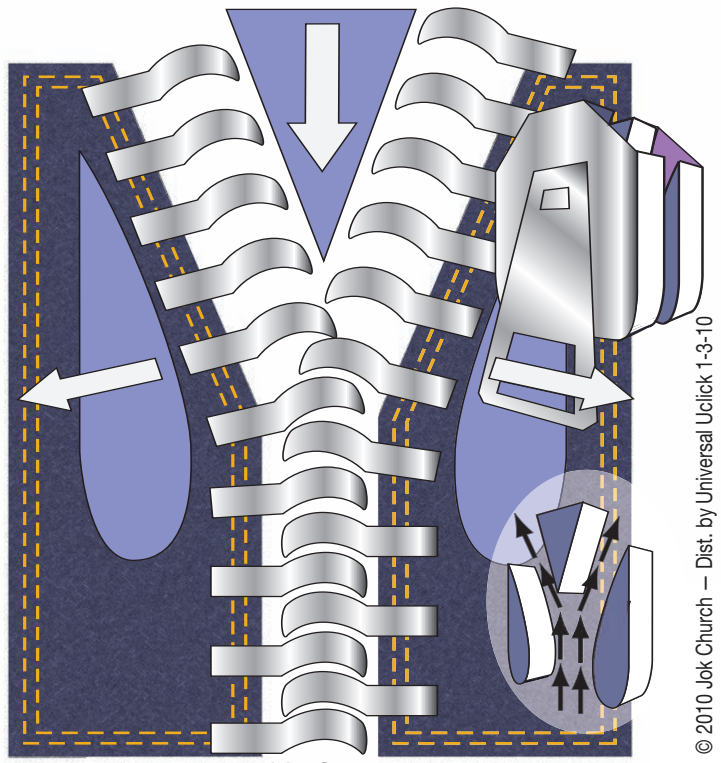
WHAT TO DO:
Put one end of the board or cardboard on a step outside. Tie the thread to the box so that you can lift it straight up. Lift the box to the height of the step. Gently add rocks – no dropping – until the thread breaks. How many rocks were in the box when the string broke?

With a new thread on the box, put it at the bottom of the board. Add the same number of rocks it took to break the string. Use the thread to gently drag the box up the ramp. Add more rocks.

SO WHAT:
One can lift a lot more rocks to the same height if you drag them up a ramp, which is really an inclined plane.

And it works the other way around, too. If you jam an inclined plane into something like a log, it will split in half.

The inclined plane takes a little bit of up-and-down work and turns it into lots and lots of sideways work.



© 2010 Jok Church — Dist. by Universal Uclick 1-3-10

P.S. from Beakman: The first thing zippers were used for was pairs of rubbers from the B.F. Goodrich rubber company.
